Blockade Of Eastern Ship Lanes Is Lifted

Wage Agreement's Acceptance Ends 18-Day Tieup; West Coast Strikers Vote

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—Longshoremen lifted their blockade of the East Coast shipping lanes today while West Coast dock workers voted on new terms to end the Pacific phase of the Nation's costly maritime tieup.

The East Coast AFL longshoremen's leader, Joseph P. Ryan, predicted the new pact would insure peace along the waterfront "for a long time to come."

The 65,000 members of Ryan's union, the International Longshoremen's Association, voted overwhelmingly yesterday to accept the terms of the new peace formula. Their action ended an 18-day-old walkout affecting ports from Maine to Virginia.

Dock workers will be back on the job "all over the Atlantic Coast" by Monday, Ryan said. Those who returned to work today—a holiday—responded to appeals that only such action could save perishables or expedite vital cargoes to their destinations.

Acceptance Appears Certain

West Coast CIO dock workers appeared certain to accept new settlement proposals on the basis of preliminary balloting. The voting probably will be completed Monday. But there were other complications obstructing an end to the 88-day-old strike there.

The costly East Coast strike piled up Marshall Plan goods valued at an estimated 36 million dollars.

It hobbled much of the Nation's merchant fleet and left this country's and Britain's transatlantic liners idle at their piers. Idle also were thousands of employes in indirectly-affected industries, furloughed because there was no work for them.

More than 500 ships were tied up during the course of the strike and estimated losses have been great.

Cost Reckoned High in Millions

On the Pacific coast, shipowners set the cost of the stoppage at about 344 million dollars. On the Atlantic coast, the cost in New York alone had been estimated at 30 million dollars a day.

The East Coast tieup was called off late yesterday. All the Manhattan locals accepted the terms, as did Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston and Hampton Roads-Norfolk-Newport News stevedores.

Only five locals—four in Brooklyn and one in Jersey City, N. J.,—rejected the pact. A rank-and-file group in Brooklyn, labeled leftist by union leaders, had indicated strong disapproval of the proposals.

Later today, however, a spokesman for the rank-and-file group in Brooklyn said the group's steering committee had decided to "advise their men to return to work immediately." The Brook-

President Hears Congratulations From the Pulpit

By The Associated Press

President Truman walked to church yesterday morning and heard himself congratulated from the pulpit on his election victory.

Mr. Truman went alone to the First Baptist Church, attended by the usual Secret Service guard, and took an aisle seat reserved for him. The pastor, Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, observed:

"While usually respecting the President's wishes that no reference be made to his presence, since this is his first visit since his recent victory at the polls, I wish to take the opportunity of extending to him on behalf of the congregation our warmest congratulations and assurance of our earnest prayers as he continues to shoulder the gigantic responsibilities of his significant office."

In Arlington Farms Home

Unknown Tomb's Guard Fires; Woman 500 Yards Away Is Hit

A bullet believed fired into the air as a warning by a guard at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at midnight Saturday pierced a wall and wounded a woman in the leg at Arlington Farms, 500 yards away.

In an operation at Walter Reed Hospital yesterday, the .30-caliber slug was removed from the thigh of Mrs. Irene Coslett, 24, wife of First Lieut. Robert T. Coslett. The Cosletts were listening to their radio in the living room of their second-floor apartment in Florida Hall when the bullet penetrated the flimsy wall of the war-built housing project. It first struck Mrs. Coslett's left leg two inches below the knee, but had sufficient velocity to continue on, penetrating her thigh.

She was given emergency treatment at the Fort Myer north post dispensary, then taken to Walter Reed Hospital, where her condition last night was described as good.

Army public relations officers said investigation indicated the bullet apparently came from the rifle of Pvt. William O'Connor, 20, of Bedford, Mass., called "one of the finest soldiers" in the Ceremonial Company, 3d Infantry Regiment, Fort Myer.

Private O'Connor reported he saw a shadow at the edge of the woods nearby.

"Halt! Who goes there?" he challenged.

There was no answer. He challenged again. This time the shadow disappeared and sound of footsteps indicated someone running away, he said.

A third time the soldier challenged, with no response. Then he fired two shots into the air, as required by regulations, and pressed a button ringing a buzzer in the office of the guard detail some distance away. Guards, noncoms and officers dashed to the Tomb where none had ever heard shots at midnight before. They scoured the

Californian Scoffs at GOP Recount Move

Democratic Official Sees 'No Grounds' For Vote Review

There are "no grounds whatsoever" for a recount of California's presidential election ballot, E. George Luckey, California State Democratic vice president, said yesterday.

He scoffed at a request by Republican National Chairman Hugh D. Scott, jr., for a review of the presidential voting in California to determine the possible need of a recount.

"He must have gotten up the other day and reread the preelection polls and thought he'd better find something to say," said Luckey, who managed President Truman's campaign in southern California.

"Mr. Scott's face might be even redder than it was the morning of November 3 if he found that the vote in California was even larger than it shows at present," he added.

Scott had asked for a review of the vote in Illinois and Ohio as well as in California.

Luckey told a press conference the latest figures show Mr. Truman won California by a majority of around 40,000 votes.

He called the press conference to announce that Vice President-elect Alben W. Barkley will be the featured speaker at a "presidential tribute dinner" at the Ambassador Hotel in Los Angeles December 6.

Luckey said the chief aim of the meeting was to "lay the foundation for rebuilding Democratic unity in California." California Democrats were at odds before the election, many of them, including James Roosevelt, joining in the "draft-Eisenhower" move before the Democratic convention.

Asked why he believed President Truman carried California in view of the GOP vice presidential candidate, Gov. Earl Warren, being a popular native son, Luckey replied that thousands of votes changed "even on the last day."

"The farmers got to thinking seriously that things could get worse," he said. "They knew that Mr. Truman was thinking about the farm people. They believed things might take a dive if there was a change of administration.

"I think the farm vote carried California for Mr. Truman."

Libby Food Executive Dies in Chicago Crash

Chicago, Nov. 28 (AP).—Scott A. Holman, 62, vice president of Libby, McNeil & Libby, food packers, was killed in an auto-taxi crash on the Outer Drive early today.

Holman, of Chicago, was a passenger in a cab driven by Charles Schaub, 55, who suffered a fractured right hip and internal injuries. The driver of the automobile, William Guinan, jr., 27, was slightly injured.

Nourse Warns On Big Rise in Arms Budget

Truman Adviser Sees Danger in Spending Beyond 15 Billions

By The Associated Press

The chief of the President's Council of Economic Advisers is convinced that much of a rise in military spending would bring "a number of direct controls."

He fears that a sizable increase beyond 15 billion dollars would unleash "new forces of inflation." The present spending rate is about 12 billion dollars.

Fifteen billions is the ceiling set by President Truman on the budget of the armed forces for fiscal 1950, starting next June 30. He said last month that the services had wanted around 23 billion dollars but that he cut them back to $14,400,000,000.

The warning of "important repercussions on the operation of the economy" was voiced by Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, chairman of the economic council, in an unreported address at the Pentagon on November 10.

Deficit or Higher Taxes

Even a rise of only three billion to five billion dollars over the presidential ceiling, Nourse said, could mean "a Federal deficit or higher taxes, shortages of labor and materials, and price control of quite extensive scope."

The military was urged to "direct every dollars to the point of greatest effectiveness, and forego every outlay based on traditional practice, corps prides, or dispensable ceremony."

Nourse sent a copy of his talk to the White House before delivering it at one of a series of off-record meetings held by Secretary of Defense Forrestal to inform "leading citizens" in industry, labor, education and public affairs on governmental problems. On request, the economist made it available yesterday.

"A program of military expenditures at any level much above the

6 Saved as Blast Destroys Yacht Off Atlantic City

Atlantic City, N. J., Nov. 28 (AP). The 73-foot yacht Tennessee was destroyed by fire in a series of explosions today. The six persons aboard were rescued.

The $125,000 craft had left Brielle, N. J., only a few hours before it caught fire four miles at sea.

Forced by the heat into a small dinghy were the owner, Henry C. Fownes, New York, and a guest, Mrs. Edith C. Forrest, 36, Rye, N. Y.

Others on board jumped into the cold rainswept sea and clung to the tiny boat. They were Capt. Edward Williams, Stamford, Conn., the skipper; George Mann, New York, a guest; Michael Tanch, New York, steward, and Edgar Duprey, Old Westbury, N. Y.

Murder Suspect in Georgia Is Released Without Bond

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 28 (AP).—Negro Schoolteacher Amy James Mallard, charged with murdering her husband, was released to attend his burial and is "cooperating with us fine now," a State investigator said tonight.

The woman, bedraggled and obviously shaken, came into Savannah today alone. She was released last night into the custody of one of her attorneys, Ellis Pope, at Lyons, Ga., 100 miles to the south.

She said she had been too terrified to make the Savannah trip by bus and spent most of the night in a drenching rain, protected by a light raincoat. Friends drove her here, she added.

At Atlanta, Capt. Delmar Jones of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation promised a new "break" in the investigation "in two or three days."

Captain Jone said Mrs. Mallard was released without bond to attend the burial of her husband, at Griffin, Ga. He added that he did not know why she went to Savannah instead of Griffin "unless it was a mixup."

"She is cooperating with us fine now," the investigator told a reporter. "For a while she did not, but after she obtained attorneys she changed her attitude."

Her husband was slain November 20. Sheriff R. E. Gray of Toombs County quoted Mrs. Mallard at the time as saying Mallard, 37, was killed from ambush by robed and armed white men.

Captain Jones said three Negroes arrested at Lyons still are being held but may be released later. He did not go into the reasons for their possible release.

Gov. Herman Talmadge in Atlanta declined to comment.

D. C. School Construction Plan Hailed

Education Officials Welcome Strayer's Report, Including Emphasis on Loan

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Dr. George D. Strayer's report to Congress recommending a 38-million-dollar school construction program for the District was hailed by local education officials yesterday.

The recommendation that such construction should be financed by borrowing from the Federal Government drew guarded agreement from the District budget officer and conditional approval from the president of the Washington Board of Trade.

The construction, recommended by Dr. Strayer and his colleagues to provide "minimum current essential school-housing needs," would require about four years if the money were available right now, Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, estimated.

Perhaps the most enthusiastic response to the 161-page report, the first of two to be made by Dr. Strayer under a $100,000 congressional appropriation, was made by Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the District Board of Education.

"We welcome Dr. Strayer's excellent, thoroughgoing report because we hope it will emphasize to the public and to Congress the need for a real building program here," said Mrs. Doyle.

"The board has been trying to get such improvements for a long time," she declared. "We hope now that Congress is going to go along with us, and that we'll see an improvement in the entire picture."

Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning said he was "very gratified" that the Strayer report "parallels our own program, which we have advocated for sometime." He also was particularly pleased, he said, that the policy of borrowing to finance school capital expenses, and the need of acquiring school sites before the land is improved, were both stressed by Dr. Strayer.

Dr. Corning also agreed that the secondary schools not now filled to capacity should be retained to take up expected increases in enrollments of "war babies."

"I think he is perfectly right on what he says about the overcrowding of classrooms, too," said Dr. Corning. "Strangely enough, the very old schools were built with large rooms, but many buildings were later built with smaller accommodations. The trend now is again toward larger ones."

District Budget Officer Walter L. Fowler, who generally has been regarded as a firm believer in the "pay as you go" policy in District financing, agreed yesterday that "to accomplish any major operation such as Dr. Strayer proposes, we would have to borrow."

Reds Launch New Drive On Nanking

Rail Towns Encircled; Mme. Chiang En Route Here to Seek Help

Nanking, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—As Mme. Chiang Kai-shek flew to Washington today to make an immediate appeal for United States aid, a Chinese general reported that Communist armies had launched a new drive from the Suchow area toward Nanking, China's threatened capital.

The Chinese first lady is expected in Washington some time Wednesday.

Chinese government authorities said Mme. Chiang would "talk with American authorities on the present Chinese situation." The wife of China's generalissimo President was accompanied by Gen. S. M. Chu, former head of the Chinese mission to Japan, and K. W. Yu, Chiang's private secretary. She left aboard a United States Military Air Transport Service plane.

Rail Towns Encircled

Military quarters here admitted that the Communists have encircled the key rail towns of Suchow, 200 miles northwest of Nanking, and Pengpu, 100 miles northwest of the threatened capital.

They said a "small" Red army was advancing down the rail line from Pengpu toward Nanking, but did not elaborate on the report that Communist spearheads had reached Chingpaling, only 35 miles from the capital.

Foreign military experts, who previously had predicted Suchow would fall within three weeks and Nanking by Christmas, said today there was a chance that govern-

Boycott Elections

Berlin Reds Plan to Set Up Own Regime

Berlin, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Russian-backed German Communists served notice today they intend to set up a separate city government which will attempt to control all Berlin.

This would operate as a rival to the new anti-Communist government to be elected next Sunday, when the citizens of Berlin's blockaded western sectors vote.

The effect of the announced Communist plans would be the final political division of the German capital.

The Communists are boycotting the elections and appealing to voters to stay home. The Russians have announced they will not recognize the government to be elected and will ban it from their sector.

The anti-Communists met the Communist challenge with such defiant campaign slogans as "We Want No Red Berlin—We Want a Free Berlin."

The British-licensed German press service reported the Communists planned to force out the few non-Communist officials who still retain offices in the city hall, which is located in the Soviet sector.

Official confirmation of the long-rumored plan for a separate city regime was given by Hans Jendretzky, city chairman of the Russian-sponsored Socialist Unity (Communist) Party.

In a speech at a party convention, Jendretzky demanded the resignation of the present city government. He denounced it as "bankrupt" and "criminal." He also asserted the coming elections would certainly split the city.

Tojo Still Alive But This May Be His Last Weekend

Tokyo (Monday), Nov. 29 (AP).—Hideki Tojo and six war crimes accomplices today began what probably will be their last week of life.

General MacArthur's public information office had "nothing to report" this morning. This means Japan's Pearl Harbor premier and six other former leaders were still alive.

The seven will be executed secretly at Sugamo Prison. The date has not been given out. In fact, headquarters has said there will be no further statements on the prisoners until after the hangings take place.

Authorities have dropped one hint—that the usual time between action on appeals and the executions was one week. General MacArthur denied clemency last Wednesday.

Rain-Swollen Rivers Menace Southern Areas

Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee Are Hit; Hundreds Homeless

Rain-swollen rivers cut across three Dixie States Sunday endangering lives, land and homes, with the worst yet to come for southernmost areas.

In many areas of Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee, rivers and creeks jumped their banks and began seeping through surrounding lowlands.

Birmingham's Navy Held Up by Flood

Birmingham, Ala., Nov. 28 (AP). Birmingham's Navy took a weekend jaunt down the Warrior River to Tuscaloosa, but couldn't get back because of the flood.

The LCS-124, training ship for the Birmingham unit of the Naval Organized Reserve, today was due to return to its base.

But the crew received word that Warrior River locks were flooded to such an extent as to prevent navigation. The vessel had 10 officers and 65 men aboard.

after the Tallapoosa River flooded part of the farm.

Hundreds of persons were left homeless in the Birmingham area and damages were expected to run into thousands of dollars. The city engineering department estimated damage to streets alone would reach more than $100,000.

The American Red Cross, Civil Air Patrol and other agencies set up emergency quarters at Birmingham's municipal airport and prepared to care for as many as 1000 homeless persons.

In Atlanta, several families in the swank residential section near Woodward Way and Peachtree Battle ave. moved first-floor furniture to upper floors and evacuated their homes.

Fifteen other Atlanta families were evacuated by the Red Cross as water from the Chattahoochee River threatened.

At Knoxville, Tenn., the Red Cross expected to have families in two creek areas moved beyond flood reach by Monday morning.

The Okmulgee River, which slices through the heart of Macon, Ga., was fed by an overflow at Jackson Lake Dam and the water hit 27 feet, the highest in the city's history. Two more feet are expected by morning.

No deaths have been attributed directly to flood waters.

First Snow Of Season Falls With Rain, Sleet

Temperature Drops To 36 as Capital Gets Taste of Winter Weather

The first snow of the season came to town yesterday as part of a soggy, vacillating combination featuring sleet and rain.

The first snow fell officially at 12:57 p. m. at the Weather Bureau at National Airport, and from that time until 3:58 p. m. it was snow, sleet and rain, on and off.

The rain, however, finally won out, and continued into the night.

Most of the snow melted as fast as it fell, however, and the Weather Bureau reported that only "a trace" of "frozen precipitation" was recorded officially.

The thermometer reacted in normal fashion, striking a high of 45 degrees at 12:40 a. m. and a low of 36 at 3:58 p. m. Nothing like the records of 70 and 15, respectively, in 1896 and 1930 for the same day.

For today, the Weather Bureau predicted cloudiness in the morning and clear weather in the afternoon. High for the day should be about 46 degrees.

Suburban areas north of the city saw more real snow yesterday than the downtown section.

Here's what happened at National Airport:

Rain began falling at 11:15 a. m. Sleet got in the act at 12:25. Snow came down at 12:57 and stopped at 1:43. Nothing unusual happened until 2:04, when snow and sleet slipped in again and descended together until 2:53. The snow then disappeared, but sleet persevered until 3:58.

Measurable precipitation by late afternoon amounted to only .36 of an inch.

The Weather Bureau's observer explained the difference—and the similarity—between sleet and snow in this manner:

Sleet is rain when it is formed in the sky, but passes through cold air on the way down. The rain is then frozen and hits the ground as ice.

Snow is frozen when it starts out in cold air. It continues through cold air, which preserves it in flake form until it falls on the ground.

Animal's Tracks Found in Pa. May Outdate Dinosaur

Marienville, Pa., Nov. 28 (AP).—A museum party today was hot on the trail of a mysterious prehistoric animal that may outdate the dinosaur by 150 to 300 million years.

The animal—whatever it was—left 20 pairs of matching three-toed footprints stretching across a mammoth piece of sandstone in the backwoods near here.

Dr. J. Leroy Kay of Carnegie Museum in Pittsburgh, said "the geological formation indicates it must have been an amphibious animal. The reptiles such as the dinosaurs didn't come until much later—but I've never seen anything like them before."

The rock formation was of the Pennsylvania System "which means the tracks were made probably 300 million years before the dinosaur lived."

The museum is going to peel off the top layer of rock and bring it back to Pittsburgh for exhibition and study.

Engineers Taking Strike Vote on Several Railroads

Cleveland, Nov. 28 (AP).—Members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers are taking a strike vote on several Western railroads, Grand Chief Engineer Alvanley Johnston said tonight.

The strike, if authorized, would be to enforce the union's demand for addition of an engineer to the crew of multiple unit Diesel engines. At present one engineer and one fireman man these units.

"Another engineer is needed to look after the machinery in the back end, while the first engineer operates the controls," said Johnston. "Safety is a factor in our demand."

A date for a strike would not be set until after the balloting is completed in about three weeks, said Johnston.

Crusade in Europe

Eisenhower Saw Crossing Of Rhine, Foe's Last Natural Barrier, From Church Tower

By Dwight D. Eisenhower

XXIII

While Montgomery, on the north, was waging the first of the February and March battles for the destruction of the German forces before the Rhine, additional Canadian and British strength began transferring from the Mediterranean to the Twenty-first Army Group. Thus while Bradley and Devers, farther south, were delivering the blows that freed the west bank of the Rhine, Montgomery, in the north, could count on early reinforcement as he completed his preparations for forcing a crossing of the river.

Montgomery was always a master in the methodical preparation of forces for a formal, set-piece attack. In this case he made the most meticulous preparations because we knew that along that front just north of the Ruhr the enemy had his best remaining troops, including portions of the First Paratroop Army.

The assault, on the night of March 23-24, was preceded by a violent artillery bombardment. On the front of the two American divisions two thousand guns of all types participated. General Simpson and I found a vantage point in an old church tower from which to witness the gunfire. Because the batteries were distributed on the flat plains on the western bank of the Rhine every flash could be seen. The din was incessant.

Meanwhile, infantry assault troops were marching up to the water's edge to get into the boats. We joined some of them and found the troops remarkably eager to finish the job. There is no substitute for a succession of great victories in building morale. Nevertheless, as we walked along I fell in with one young soldier who seemed silent and depressed.

"How are you feeling, son?" I asked.

"General," he said, "I'm awful nervous. I was wounded two months ago and just got back from the hospital yesterday. I don't feel so good!"

"Well," I said to him, "you and I are a good pair then, because I'm nervous, too. But we've planned this attack for a long time and we've got all the planes, guns, and airborne troops we can use to smash the Germans. Maybe if we just walk along together to the river we'll be good for each other."

"Oh," he said, "I meant I was nervous; I'm not any more." And I knew what he meant.

Arrival of Airborne Units Seen From Hill

With the arrival of daylight I went to a convenient hill from which to witness the arrival of the airborne units which were scheduled to begin their drop at 10 o'clock. The airborne troops were carried to the assault in a total of 1572 planes and 1326 gliders; 889 fighter planes escorted them during the fight, and 2153 other fighters provided cover over the target area and established a defensive screen to the eastward.

Fog and the smoke of the battlefield prevented a complete view of the airborne operation, but I was

Policeman's Flare Guides 2 in Plane to Safe Landing

Six persons escaped injury when two airplanes made forced landings in the Washington area during yesterday's snow and sleet storm.

Sergt. Wheeler

Two men in a light plane over Silver Spring were guided to a safe landing by a policeman holding red flares out his automobile window throughout a 14-mile drive to Congressional Airport.

Michael Straight of Weynoke, near Alexandria, Va., editor of New Republic Magazine, and three companions flying to New York from the American Veterans Committee convention in Cleveland, landed without mishap in a cow pasture near Herndon, Va., with a 10-minute supply of gasoline remaining.

Landing safely at Congressional Airport, George N. Hall, 28, of 1813 Belvedere blvd., Silver Spring, said to Montgomery County Police Sergt. Melvin Wheeler, "You're the first policeman I ever wanted to kiss." Hall was accompanied in his little Ercoupe by Winfield J. Nagle, 29, of 5 Old Chester rd., Bethesda, Md.

Wheeler, a Coast Guard war veteran who frequently flies himself, was aided in his unusual rescue effort by Police Pvt. William DeVries. It started around noon when they got word from residents of the Forest Glen-Montgomery Hills section of Silver Spring, that a small plane was circling and

Israeli Bid to U. N. Is Expected Today

Paris, Nov. 28 (AP).—Israel is expected to ask for membership in the United Nations Monday on the first anniversary of the General Assembly's Palestine partition decision.

The disclosure by a source familiar with Israeli policies came as the Assembly's 58-member political committee prepared to resume debate on proposals designed to settle the Holy Land problem permanently.

The committee will have before it Monday a tabulation of all the proposals contained in resolutions or amendments submitted on Palestine at this session of the Assembly.

Most of the proposals provide for a conciliation commission to be set up to find a solution to boundary and political problems growing out of the partition plan. The United States, Britain and Australia have proposals along this general line.

Russia and Poland are demanding the immediate withdrawal of all foreign (Arab) troops and all foreign military personnel (presumably the U. N. truce observers).

Israel's membership application will have to win approval in the 11-nation Security Council before it can be acted upon by the Assembly. Seven affirmative votes are needed for Security Council approval.

The United States, Russia, Canada and the Soviet Ukraine are definitely committed for the admission of Israel. This means only three more votes must be picked up from among the other seven—Britain, France, China, Colombia, Belgium, Syria and Argentina.

An informed British source said Britain's present position was that Israel should not be admitted to the U. N. until the final boundaries of partitioned Palestine are determined. A negative vote by Britain would veto Israel's bid, but most observers felt Britain would abstain.

Policy Report

Resistance To Tito Held Big, But Mute

By The Associated Press

There is ""massive" resistance to Marshal Tito's regime in Yugoslavia but it is getting nowhere, a Foreign Policy Association report said yesterday.

Opposition has become "more and more difficult" because of the power wielded by the leaders, and opposition groups "seem to be lacking in all major prerequisites of success," the report said. Resistance was described as disorganized and generally mute, with neither national leaders nor a concrete program.

The report was written for the private research organization by Andrew Gyorgy, assistant professor of political science at Yale. It said that in eastern Europe under Communist domination "opposition groups were rendered completely ineffective during 1948."

Gyorgy described the "eastern European Communist" as a "militant political activist, while the Socialist or Liberal can easily be persuaded to embrace strategies of passive resistance." The result, he said, is that "opposition programs are frequently bungled."

In Hungary and in Yugoslavian Croatia, the report said, the regimes have encountered opposition of the Roman Catholic Church. The latter province cannot be brought under effective police control as easily as other areas of the country, he noted.

Slav Payment Stirs Problem Of Dispersal

By the United Press

The Government has 17 million dollars in the Treasury which doesn't belong to it, and it is going to ask Congress to do something about parceling it out to the rightful owners.

The money was paid into the Treasury several months ago by Marshal Tito's Communist-controlled Yugoslav government. It represented a lump sum settlement of certain postwar American claims against Yugoslavia.

The rightful owners are: (1) More than 1000 Americans whose Yugoslav property was seized and nationalized by the Communists, and (2) the United States Government, which filed claims for an Army plane destroyed by the Yugoslav government.

None of the other Communist governments has settled similar claims from private citizens who have "lost" millions of dollars in property through nationalization behind the iron curtain.

Yugoslavia shelled out the 17 million dollars when persuaded it was the only condition on which this Government would free 45 million dollars in Yugoslav gold and assets frozen in this country since the war.

The American plane was shot down by Tito's fliers more than two years ago. Five Americans were killed, and their deaths caused international furore. After receiving a 48-hour "ultimatum" from the United States, the Yugoslav government apologized and paid $30,000 indemnity to each of the families of the slain fliers.

Jews, Arabs Reported Conferring on Cease-Fire

Haifa, Israel, Nov. 28 (AP).—A United Nations spokesman announced today direct Jewish-Arab talks are going on in Jerusalem in an effort to reach a cease-fire agreement for the Holy City.

He expressed the belief a cease-fire agreement for the entire Jerusalem area will be reached soon.

Jap Seamen Call Strike To Enforce Pay Demand

Tokyo, Nov. 28 (AP).—The All-Japan Seamen's Union announced tonight it would start a 48-hour strike at midnight to enforce demands for a 30 per cent wage increase.

The seamen said if this strike did not produce results, they would go on a 72-hour walkout December 4.

Forty thousand union members and 400 ships are involved. Ships connected with occupation or repatriation work are not affected.

Sense of God Held Essential

The Rev. C. Stanley Lowell yesterday warned his congregation that a "sense of responsibility to One greater than we are is essential to character" and told them that the American people today have lost such a conviction.

Speaking in the Wesley Methodist Church, Connecticut ave. and Jocelyn st. nw., the minister said there was a time when Americans "acknowledged their responsibility to God and to their fellows" but that "unfortunately the complexion of American life has since changed."

In industry "the old sense of craftsmanship has given way to the feeling that a man ought to do just enough to get by, or a little less," Mr. Lowell said.

Irresponsible Parents

"The beau ideal of American politics is the man who votes for every expenditure and against every tax," he stated.

He continued: "The American home has become irresponsible, parents are too engrossed in their pursuit of bridge, cocktails, business and personal pleasures to put any real effort into their home.

"The problem," he declared, "is not being helped by a highly vocal group who seem to think that since disease is curable, conception preventable, divorce obtainable and God impossible, we shall be on our way to the perfect world."

Address by Colonel Fell

In an address to the annual corporate communion breakfast of men and boys of Ascension and St. Agnes Episcopal Church yesterday, Col. Edgar T. Fell, special assistant to the Attorney General, compared the good churchman to a soldier.

"Real churchmanship qualities are identical with those of a top soldier," said Colonel Fell, speaking at the parish hall, 12th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw.

Arlington Grocer Gives $4000 In Canned Goods For Israel

The Washington Post

DOING THEIR BIT—Even the youngsters help their parents prepare flood-damaged foodstuffs for the Food for Israel drive. Here Kenny and Susan Letzler, 5 and 8, respectively, of 313 George Mason dr., Arlington, Va., place jars on the drying bench

A grocer's generosity and cooperation of a group of volunteers has transferred $4000 worth of canned foodstuffs into a good-sized package for "Food for Israel."

The canned goods—about 700 cases—was given by Nathan Movitz, operator of Westover District Grocery Store, 5863 N. Washington blvd., Arlington.

The donation came as the aftermath of a flash flood which inundated the basement of Movitz' store with 9 feet of water, washing off and disfiguring labels on the cans and denting some of them.

While the label damage made them unsalable, the contents of the cans were unharmed.

Since Movitz made the offer, volunteers, including entire families and children as young as five years, have worked for the past two weeks, washing, sterilizing, drying, sorting and packing the cans for shipment.

The work is being done under the Arlington-Fairfax Zionist District's "Food for Israel" committee. The Arlington-Fairfax District also will pay the cost of hiring trucks to transport the food to New York, where the national "Food for Israel" organization will take over.

Movitz, who lives at 5906 N. 19th st., Arlington, estimates the foodstuffs represent about half the $8000 loss he suffered in the flash flood.

Communist Party Members Made Ineligible to Join AVC

Cleveland, Nov. 28 (AP).—The American Veterans Committee today made Communist Party members ineligible for AVC membership.

By a vote of 13,516 to 8830, delegates to the third annual AVC convention, ending today, passed a resolution which said:

". . . The totalitarian principles and destructive practices of the American Communist Party are inconsistent with the democratic principles and constructive program of AVC, inimical to its welfare, and . . . Communist Party members are ineligible for membership in AVC.

"We instruct our incoming national leadership to continue using all means appropriate under the Constitution to clean out and keep out members of the Communist Party from our ranks."

The 1500 delegates to the four-day meeting also passed resolutions sustaining action of the organization's 25-member national planning committee in suspending 13 New York City chapters, revoking the charter of the Ernie Pyle chapter of New York and expelling Richard Crohn and Attorney Morris Pottish of New York from membership.

The committee's disciplinary action was taken earlier this month because the chapters, meeting in a New York metropolitan area council last September with Pottish presiding, allowed Crohn to participate as a delegate. Crohn was then under suspension by national officers for violating the organization's rules by using AVC's name at a Wallace-for-President rally.

Each of the 1500 delegates to the four-day meeting cast votes for the number of paid-up members he represented. The organization has a total paid-up membership of nearly 40,000.

Atlantic Pact Draft Due Here Late in Week

By The Associated Press

Creation of a military alliance between the United States and Canada and key nations of western Europe is expected to be proposed to the State Department late this week by the Western European Union countries.

This step is about a month behind the schedule originally projected by American and European diplomats.

Authorities speculated that the proposed pact probably cannot be made ready for ratification now until late February or early March—depending on possible further delays as disputed points arise in negotiations.

The aim of the defense arrangement is to establish a North Atlantic regional security system, under the United Nations Charter. It would bind together the United States, Canada, Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Luxembourg and several other strategically located countries such as Iceland, Denmark and Portugal.

Undersecretary of State Lovett and diplomats of Canada and the western European countries held a series of "exploratory talks" here last summer. The broad outlines of the system were laid down then. In the fall the five European nations comprising the Western European Union formally decided that they would propose such a pact to the American Government.

At that time State Department officials believed that the proposal would be made immediately after the November 2 presidential election. However, the European countries, according to dispatches from London, decided to draw first their own draft of the proposed defense pact and this required more time than was originally scheduled.

'Blackout' Fog Grips Britain, West Europe

London, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—A "white blackout" of thick, soupy fog hung over the British Isles and parts of western Europe today, causing at least two deaths and slowing all forms of transportation.

Sailors aboard the Cunard liner Queen Elizabeth could not even see the end of the ship's gangplank.

[The Queen Elizabeth, held at her Southampton dock for 11 days by the New York longshoremen's strike, was stopped from sailing by the fog, the Associated Press reported.]

Suburban train service ran fitfully on a station-to-station basis. Private automobiles either were locked up in garages or abandoned in the streets. Air traffic was halted completely.

A 79-year-old woman burned to death in a fire in her suburban home because firemen were slow in getting there. It took them nearly half an hour to travel three-quarters of a mile through the fog. They were guided to the scene by two firemen who walked in front of the trucks carrying lighted flares.

A 41-year-old housewife, was drowned in the Thames River. She fell into the swift-running stream while walking along the towpath.

In Southgate, a group of persons who thought they were lining up to vote in the central ward by-election found themselves in a line for fish and chips.

In Paris, visibility was down to less than 30 yards. Fishing boats in Denmark lay rocking at their moorings, and in Berlin, the vital Anglo-American Airlift was halted for 15 hours.

West Europe Puzzle Balks Economists

To Europe, China

Recovery Grants Pass 3.7 Billions

By Harvey Hudson

Paris, Nov. 28 (AP).—Western European nations trying to fit together their economic jigsaw puzzles have almost decided they do not have the right pieces.

They are unable to find enough steel or coal, farm or industrial machinery to fill the gaps where those things are needed. Furthermore, they have too much of some items, such as high-quality textiles, wines and liquors.

Too many countries want to buy products of which no one has a surplus. Too many countries want to sell luxury items that no one else wants to buy in sufficient quantity.

These problems are being studied within the Organization for European Economic Cooperation. (OEEC). That is the organization of 16 European nations and three occupied territories receiving aid under the European Recovery Program.

Hoffman Asks 4-Year Plan

Economic Cooperation Administrator Paul G. Hoffman, who is overseeing allocation of American funds appropriated for the ERP, asked the European countries taking part to give him a four-year plan showing how they could be economically self-sufficient by 1952 when ERP is scheduled to end.

The participating countries submitted their individual four-year programs to the OEEC which undertook to draw up the master plan for Hoffman. Since the shortages and surpluses failed to balance—or even indicate a possible way of compromise—the OEEC planners have been unable to arrive at an over-all program.

Deadline Moved Back

Originally, it was hoped the program would be ready by November 15. When it became apparent this deadline could not be met, a new target date of December 15 was set.

Now, those engaged in the discussions feel that an integrated program is not possible in the near future.

Euopeans do not say that future progress is impossible. Nor do they say that they want to quit trying to find a solution. But they do say a critical stage in the planning has been reached and that no solution is in sight.

By The Associated Press

American foreign-aid grants to Europe and China have passed $3,787,135,899, the Economic Cooperation Administration announced yesterday.

Its weekly survey of recovery operation shows that $176,283,721 in new grants were approved in the seven days ending November 24.

The United Kingdom received $83,316,000 during the period, topping China, to which new or revised grants were made.

A total of 23 million dollars in additional aid was approved for China.

The breakdown of allotments: Ireland, $16,493,578; Italy, $14,193,400; France, $9,200,154; the Netherlands and Netherlands East Indies, $12,325,000; Sweden, $7,305,924; Austria, $4,708,122; Denmark, $3,516,749; Greece, $3,297,629; Trieste, $1,386,000; Belgium, $1,107,465, and Iceland, $240,000.

Previous allotments to bizone Germany were cut by $3,184,900, and $324,000 was reduced from grants made to the French zone of Germany.

In total grants, $1,542,788,426 of ECA funds have gone for food and agricultural recovery and $1,772,941,018 for industrial items. The balance was used for ocean freight, technical services and specific reconstruction projects.

Nourse Warns On Spending

present would, in my judgment, force us out of the free market procedures of a peacetime economy and drive us into the acceptance of a number of direct controls," he said.

Economy at "Critical Point"

"Otherwise, the strength of the inflationary pressures, the confusion and delay in the defense effort, and the friction and hardship in the civilian economy would create demoralizing conditions both in market processes and in the public mind."

The economy now is at a "critical point," Nourse said, except for the enlarged defense program and foreign outlays, "deflationary influences would by this time have become clearly evident."

"Even if the defense program were limited to 15 billion dollars, the expenditure of that amount would exceed by at least three billions the present annual rate of cash outlays for national defense," he said. "If to this are added further increases, to a level of 18 or 20 billions, there are bound to be important repercussions on the operation of the economy."

Allocation of scarce materials would be needed, reinforced by inventory controls and other war-type regulations, he said.

"Placement Control"

"Placement control" of labor would be needed to channel scarce skills, he said, adding:

"Finally, to prevent the spiraling of living costs, wages and production costs, price control of a quite extensive scope might well be necessary, unless severe fiscal measures were invoked to curtail civilian demand.

He concluded:

"If any moral is to be drawn from the objective analysis of this problem, it would go to these points:

"1. That those who are entrusted with our foreign relations must be wise as serpents and harmless as doves so that the need for military effort shall be held or reduced to the lowest possible point.

"2. That those who are entrusted with the military effort . . . direct every dollar to the point of greatest effectiveness . . .

"3. That the Government stand ready to introduce those measures of finance and control which will minimize the disturbing effects upon the economy.

"4. That the people at large face the necessities of the situation, make the sacrifices and accept the disciplines which are entailed."

Security Resources Board Names Aides

William J. Fisher, York, Pa., farm equipment manufacturer, yesterday was named to a post with the National Security Resources Board. He will direct the mobilization planning activities of the agricultural machinery and implement division.

Arthur M. Hill, board chairman, also announced appointment of Arthur U. Sufrin, Philadelphia, as deputy director of the division. He recently served as consultant for the Economic Cooperation Administration on farm machinery problems.

Bribe Scandal

Jap Official Asks Arrest Of Ashida

HITOSHI ASHIDA
Under Fire in Bribery Case

Tokyo, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Tokyo procurator today demanded the arrest as a suspected bribe-taker of Hitoshi Ashida, until last month Premier of Japan.

The Democratic Party immediately accepted Ashida's resignation as its president.

An arrest cannot be made unless sanctioned by the House of Representatives, of which Ashida is a member.

The House steering committee met with Attorney General Shinkichi Ueda late today and decided to call in Ashida before deciding whether to reject the request or pass it on for a House vote.

Ashida became premier last March 9. He and his cabinet resigned October 7 after a cabinet member and a score of prominent politicians and financiers had been jailed on bribe charges. In resigning at that time, Ashida said his cabinet was forced to accept "moral responsibility" for the scandal.

The cases involve a $2,800,000,000-yen (about $10,000,000) loan by the government's Reconstruction Finance Bank to the Showa Denko Fertilizer Co.

Attorney General Ueda said a building contractor had made a statement which led to arrest of Ashida's son-in-law and former private secretary, Mitsusbumi Shimokobe.

Questioning of Shimokobe, the attorney general said, caused the Tokyo district procurator to demand Ashida's arrest.

World Wheat Estimate Up 35 Million Bu.

The Agriculture Department reported yesterday that revised estimates placed this year's world wheat crop at 6,285,000,000 bushels.

This is about 35 million bushels more than was estimated in September. The increase was largely in Europe, where supplies have been short.

Production last year was 5,815,000,000 bushels. Output averaged 7,010,000,000 for the 1935-1939 period.

This year's world rye crop was estimated at 1,625,000,000 bushels compared with 1,490,000,000 last year and 1,730,000,000 for the prewar average.

World sugar production was put at 37,694,000 short tons compared with 33,869,000 last year and 34,710,000 for the prewar average. Peanut production was estimated at a new record of 10,900,000,000 short tons. This compares with 10,579,000,000 last year and 9,531,000,000 for the prewar average.

This year's world wool crop was indicated at 3,730,000,000 pounds compared with 3,710,000,000 last year and 3,920,000,000 for the prewar average.

Costa Rica Ratifies Rio Defense Pact

New Orleans, Nov. 28 (AP).—Mario A. Esquivel, Costa Rican Ambassador to the United States, said today his country had ratified the Rio agreement for Western Hemisphere defense, thus assuring its early effectiveness.

He said Costa Rica was the fourteenth country to ratify the agreement. It is to be presented to the Pan American Union in Washington this week by Ambassador Esquivel and will become effective at that time.

The basic features of the treaty are:

1. In the event one American state attacks another American state, the others will immediately render military assistance to the nation under attack.

2. If one American state is attacked by a nonhemisphere power, all will determine steps to safeguard the hemisphere.

3. A "security zone" would be mapped out from the North Pole to the South Pole.

Brazil, Mexico, Venezuela, the United States, Colombia, Nicaragua, Honduras, El Salvador, Paraguay, Dominican Republic, Panama, Haiti and Uruguay have ratified.

Pan American Union officials said tonight a special ceremony would be held when Costa Rica deposits her ratification.

Canada may join if she desires.

FAO to Urge World Food Agreements

By the United Press

The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization winds up its fourth annual conference today by taking the first hesitant steps toward solving one of its biggest problems.

That headache is how to assure the world's big surplus-producing countries, like the United States and Canada, an outlet for food and fibers which other nations need but are not able to afford.

The food organization has no authority to take positive action. But it will recommend a series of commodity agreements patterned after the international wheat agreement. That agreement died this year when Congress failed to approve it.

Commodity agreements have two aims. They encourage surplus countries to maintain a big food production by assuring their farmers a definite export market at a floor price. Importing nations are protected against sudden price increases.

The United States now is trying to arrange another international conference about January 25 to write a new wheat pact. Because wheat prices now are lower than when the original agreement was written, the new floor and ceiling prices also probably will be lower.

This country also suggested an international sugar agreement and indicated it would be open to other pacts on rice, fats and oils, and feed grains. In the field of fibers, the United States probably would be interested in cotton and wool agreements.

Reds Launch New Drive

ment forces might be able to drive the Communists back from the capital.

Gen. Tu Yu-ming, Chinese commander in the Suchow theater, told United Press Correspondent Joseph Jacob that Communist columns driving south on both flanks of Suchow had joined forces somewhere south of the city, creating a new threat to Suchow and Pengpu.

Tu declined to indicate where the two armies had met, but earlier reports indicated that the most likely point was Suhsien, a rail town about halfway between the two Chinese defense bastions.

Both Suchow and Pengpu were relying solely on air transports for badly needed supplies, Nanking quarters said.

Chinese officers reported that the Communist generals commanding the pincer thrust on Suhsien were quarreling among themselves, fostering government hopes of a "divide and conquer" victory.

One officer had a handbill, believed to have been mimeographed at Liu Po-chen's headquarters, denouncing Gen. Chen Yi as a "deceitful, treacherous, shameless rascal." The poster was found on the body of a Communist casualty.

Husband, 78, Charged With Wife's Murder

Willard, Ohio, Nov. 28 (AP).—William Bonnett, 78, was charged with first-degree murder today. His wife, Maude, 65, had been beaten to death in their apartment.

Mayor Ray A. Snook said the retired railroader admitted beating his wife with a vase and hammer because they had argued for years and "I got tired of it."

They had been married about 15 years. It was the second marriage for each, Snook said.

Decisive Chinese Battle Seen

Suchow, China, Nov. 28 (AP).—Gen. Tu Li-ming, acting government commander in the Suchow area, said today that a "decisive" battle for central China was about to begin.

Circling in a commercial plane over 100 miles of ragged battlefront, it appeared to this correspondent that a good-sized battle already was in progress.

From 10 miles southwest of Suchow on down nearly to Pengpu, 100 miles southeast, I counted 18 villages in flames, and those already in ashes were too numerous to count.

Puffs of smoke from sporadic gunfire and from bombs of Nationalist B-24s dotted the countryside.

Capt. Gordon Smith of New York, piloting the Chinese National Aviation Corp. liner, declared, "The Nationalists are fighting as I've never seen them fight before."

This plane, and many others, made rapid shuttle flights over the 200 miles to Nanking, taking out government wounded. More than 2700 were thus removed today.

General Tu was interviewed hastily as he was departing from Suchow's southeast airfield for conferences in Nanking. He expected to circle the battlefields and return to Suchow late tonight.

Tu said the Red threat to Suchow itself was definitely over. From the artillery fire I saw five minutes' flight outside, his view seemed to tend towards optimism.

American-made B-24 and B-25 bombers and P-51 fighters and Canadian-made Mosquitoes roared in and out of the airfield all day long.

A prime target of their bombing was Suhsien, Communist-held railway town 45 miles to the south.

Suhsien itself looked abnormally quiet from the air, but surrounding villages were on fire.

From the air, the railway leading to the Yangtze appeared to be intact. General Tu said it had been cut at several places, but the rails and ties had not been destroyed, so repairs should be easy to make.

It looked as if the Reds had not damaged the line too badly because they hoped to use it themselves at some future time.

Advisers to Urge T-H Compromise

By The Associated Press

President Truman is due to get today some advice from a special Labor Department legal team to offer Congress a middle-of-the-road labor bill when he asks for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act.

This is a somewhat different stand than that taken by both AFL and CIO at their conventions, just ended. The big labor groups want the Taft-Hartley Act wiped out and replaced by the Wagner Labor Act of 1935.

Both AFL and CIO have indicated willingness to consider changes in the Wagner Act, but they want that law restored first.

The legal advisers, working night and day for the past week, plan a general recommendation to Mr. Truman for guidance in his "state of the Union" message at the start of the Eighty-first Congress in January.

Their recommendation will contain no specific details on legislation. A rough draft of a bill for Mr. Truman's consideration will be ready in "two or three weeks," the lawyers said.

The plan is to suggest that Mr. Truman appeal to both sides—those who want the Taft-Hartley law repealed, and those who want to keep or make it more restrictive on labor union activities—to get together on a compromise.

Then, the lawyers think, Mr. Truman should follow through with a concrete legislative proposal representing his idea of a fair adjustment.

What this should contain, the lawyers are not saying at this time. There will be conferences with labor and probably management groups. Secretary of Labor Tobin has said he will meet with spokesmen for both interests.

New Talks Sought

D. C. Printers Reject Offer Of $5 Raise

Members of Columbia Typographical Union No. 101 (AFL), in a meeting at Pythian Temple, yesterday rejected a $5-a-week wage increase offered by Washington newspaper publishers.

The membership accepted by a vote of 359 to 14 the recommendation of union officials, the scale committee and E. S. Sinnig, an international representative of the union, that the publishers' offer should be declined as "inadequate."

James J. O'Connor, union president, said a new negotiating meeting would be sought with the publishers.

Peyton R. Evans, executive secretary of the Washington Publishers Association, last week termed the four newspaper publishers' offer a "last and final" one. He had no comment on the union's action yesterday.

In addition to the $5 wage boost, the rejected offer would have given workers with five years' service a third week of vacation. The union has asked that weekly wages be increased from $85 to $100 for the day shift; $90 to $110 for the night shift, and $95 to $110 for the third shift. A reduction in hours for third-shift workers, sick leave and a pension plan also were asked. The workweek is now 35 hours.

Post to Hold Forum On Veterans' Problems

A forum on veterans' problems will be conducted December 7 at 8 p. m. in the Silver Spring Armory, sponsored by the Cissel Saxon Post, American Legion.

Representatives from the Washington Regional Office of the Veterans Administration, headed by Chester W. Naumowicz, manager, will participate. Talks will cover rehabilitation, claims, housing, insurance and medical matters.

Bipartisan Policy Still Holds, Taft Says in Germany

Frankfurt, Germany, Nov. 28 (AP). Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said today the Republican Party "is fully committed" to support the bipartisan foreign policy of the United States.

He told a brief news conference he is in Europe to get background material on various problems which will arise in the coming session of Congress. He arrived in Frankfurt this morning.

Taft refused to answer questions about the recent presidential election, except to say: "the election produced a situation which had not been foreseen." He said he expects to run for reelection to the Senate when his term expires two years hence.

Folger Shakespeare Library Of Age at Last, Director Says

VIRGINIA HISTORY—Louis B. Wright, director of Folger Shakespeare Library, who announces an expanded program of service at that institution, here examines one of the earliest maps of Virginia. It is printed in the second edition of Thomas Hariot's "A Brief and True Report of the New Found Land of Virginia," published in 1590

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Dr. Louis B. Wright, director of the Folger Shakespeare Library, declared yesterday the library has finally passed from youth to maturity.

Characterizing the library's youth as a period devoted to building up its resources, he said the emphasis is now toward making the rare book collections more useful to scholars.

Dr. Wright, research professor at the Henry E. Huntington Library and editor of its quarterly before becoming director of the Folger in July, said details of the program to make the library more useful include air conditioning to provide better working conditions for students, use of the library's theater by distinguished drama groups, and building up the reference collections.

Has Broader Scope

The library, located at 2d and B sts. s.e., is also going to emphasize that it is a center not alone for the study of Shakespeare, but of all aspects of sixteenth and seventeenth century life, Dr. Wright said, pointing out that these were formative periods in early American life and civilization.

"For instance," he said, "a recent check of the Folger's holdings show that it has one of the largest collections in the country of early books describing the voyages of discovery and exploration in the New World. Many of these books are scarcer than rare Shakespeareana because of their being printed in small editions and read to pieces."

Praising the work of the late Dr. Joseph Quincy Adams, the Folger's first director, and the staff, Dr. Wright said "they have performed a work of great service in building up the collections.

Had Similar Plans

"At the time of his death (November 10, 1946, Dr. Adams was considering plans for assimilating this great collection and making it more useful. The present policies are a logical development made possible by the fine foundation which he and the staff have laid.

"We shall continue to collect sixteenth and seventeenth century books to the limit of our resources, but like all endowed institutions we are suffering from the effects of inflation. The price of rare books has gone so high that it is a good time to pause and assimilate what we have," Dr. Wright said.

"We are going to stay the first Shakespeare Library of the country, but we want to emphasize that this is one of the great libraries of the world for the study of English Renaissance civilization."

"American scholars owe a great debt to Dr. Adams for bringing over from England the magnificent collection of Sir Leicester Harmsworth. Harmsworth had approximately 10,000 of the 26,000 different English books and pamphlets known in his time to have been printed before 1641," Dr. Wright said. "That, added to what Mr. and Mrs. Folger had bought, made this library one of the richest in the world."

In original titles of the period, he said, the Folger is probably only exceeded by the British Museum and the Bodleian at Oxford.

"We hope to attract the foremost scholars of the United States and England to the Folger, first by providing the most effective library possible, and, second, by making available modest grants-in-aid. We hope to make the library particularly useful to scholars of this area.

"There will be no bar of race, creed or color," he said, "the only question will be, how competent is the scholar?"

Women's Group Plans Junior Police Benefit

Employment Holds At 60-Million Level

To Aid Prosperity

Farmers Told To Spend for Better Living

By The Associated Press

The National Planning Association said yesterday farmers could help national prosperity by spending their boom-time profits on better homes, equipment, clothing, education and medical care.

Improvements are needed in American farm living, said a report issued by the association's agriculture committee. It advised against buying new land at inflated prices.

"For a large part of the farm population at the present time, there is no longer the excuse of low income for not providing houses and home conveniences for their families on a par with town and city homes," the report said.

The association said farm spending for better living would have a beneficial effect on the whole economy. It would help maintain full employment in the cities, the report added. In turn, such employment would keep a good market for farm products.

The report was prepared by Lowry Nelson, professor of sociology at the University of Minnesota. It was approved by the association's Agriculture Committee, which includes 25 farm leaders from all parts of the country.

By the United Press

Employment held at a high level in October with some 60,134,000 persons at work, and there are strong indications it will remain high well into next year at least, the Government said yesterday.

It issued a report which said that only 1,642,000 persons, or 2.7 per cent of the labor force, were unemployed. That was near the record postwar low set last November and "a figure normally regarded as rockbottom in peacetime."

Defense Spending Cited

October employment was one million higher than in the same month last year.

Robert C. Goodwin, director of the Bureau of Employment Security, reported to Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing that the employment rolls were kept up by defense spending, "substantial" exports and continued record demand for steel and other durable goods.

Goodwin included a detailed report on condtions in the aircraft industry where employment "has turned the corner from postwar reductions and is now moving gradually upward." He said expansion in the aircraft industry will continue gradually through the next six months.

He found some "soft spots," notably in such fields as textiles, furniture and shoe manufacture, as well as normal seasonal declines in construction and food processing. But he said the general picture "looks good with labor demand strong."

He predicted only a temporary increase in unemployment after "extra" employes hired for the pre-Christmas season are laid off.

"The outlook is for a continuation of the low unemployment conditions which have accompanied the sharp rise in postwar employment," he added.

Hackley's Trial On Bribe Charge Set for Dec. 15

Luray, Va., Nov. 28.—Charles Kenneth Hackley of Stanley, former member of Stanley town council, and recently licensed Methodist minister, will go on trial here December 15 on a charge of bribery.

Hackley is accused of accepting $100 from Loy Huffman to reduce a charge when Hackley was acting as trial justice for the town. Hackley was suspended as trial justice when two charges of embezzlement and one of bribery were placed against him. He was cleared by a Page County jury on one charge of embezzlement, and has not been tried on the other.

Workers Vote to Strike At 2 Plants of GMC

Chicago, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Officials of the CIO United Auto Workers said today that workers at two plants of the electromotive division of General Motors have voted to strike in protest against an alleged speedup.

John Malzone, president of local 719, said 88 per cent of the workers voted to walk out of the two plants in the Chicago area. The union is the bargaining agent for approximately 12,000 production and maintenance workers at the two plants.

Roads File Briefs for Freight Rise

By the United Press

The railroads said yesterday that commerce and industry "can bear without detriment" the 13 per cent freight rate increase which the carriers seek.

The railroads presented their side of the case in briefs filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission, which will begin hearings Tuesday on the proposed boost.

Fred Capri, Pennsylvania Railroad vice president in charge of traffic, said increases granted by the commission in the past "have not curtailed industrial production or materially interfered with the normal flow of traffic."

Joseph L. Sheppard, assistant vice president of the Illinois Central, did not think the increase would drive any substantial amount of traffic away from the railroads. He said operators of other forms of transportation "have many problems not unlike those confronting the railroads."

Jesse P. Patterson of the New York Central, said the proposed rate hikes on coal, coke and iron are of particular importance to his line.

Robert O. Small, freight traffic manager of the Chicago & Northwestern, said shippers "generally recognize the absolute necessity" of the rate increase.

East Coast Ships Freed

lyn group's action ended any threat of further disruption of East Coast dock operations.

The terms, among other benefits, provide a 13-cent increase in the previous basic wage of $1.75 an hour, and an increase of 19½ cents in the old overtime and night rate of $2.62½.

The West Coast agreement pattern provides a 15-cent increase to $1.82 in the basic hourly pay rate, plus other benefits. Some 27,000 dock workers, led by Harry Bridges, are involved there.

In preliminary voting yesterday, San Francisco's 6000 longshoremen approved it by a standing vote while some 1200 others in Seattle accepted it overwhelmingly by a show of hands.

While approval of all the locals there seemed certain, the strike is expected to continue until at least three other unions involved arrive at contract terms with operators. Waterfront observers predicted, haowever, that an accord would be reached speedily.

Even then, full settlement with these unions might not pry loose strike-locked shipping. Harry Lundeberg, president of the AFL sailors' union of the Pacific, has declared that no ships will sail from West Coast ports until his union gets a new contract.

mahogany . . . distinguished medium for "modern at its best" bedroom pieces

Not a high-flown phrase, our describing these fine pieces as "modern at its best," but a summary of these well-considered advantages: (1) lower, longer, less deep lines that are trimmer and better scaled to smaller rooms. (2) eye-pleasing simplicity of design that provides for every available inch of storage space. (3) deep, wide, roomy drawers, many of which are sectioned to your needs. (4) flexibility that allows chests, dresser and night tables to ensemble beautifully in various ways or to appear individually as accent pieces in living or dining room. Some pieces in blond mahogany as well.

Borrowing For Schools

Dr. George D. Strayer of Columbia University, who was hired by Congress to survey the District school system, has told the people little about their schools that they did not already know. The deficiencies in buildings and equipment in many of our schools have been worrying educators, parents and local officials ever since the early days of the war. Several programs for the construction of new schools and rehabilitation of old ones have been worked out. All have come to naught for want of financing. The great contribution that Dr. Strayer has made lies in the detailed facts with which he has buttressed his recommendations and in his forthright advocacy of borrowing for school construction.

As to the deficiencies of our schools, Dr. Strayer is no more critical than was the education committee of the Board of Trade which earlier this year expressed the unanimous opinion that "conditions in these schools are disgraceful" and said that "sufficient funds should be made available to correct them immediately." There are, however, some impressive findings in the Strayer report. More than 65 per cent of the classes in white elementary schools and more than 86 per cent in colored elementary schools have more than 30 pupils—the maximum size of classes recommended by the report. The high schools and junior high schools are similarly crowded.

Of the white schools of all types 30 per cent are 50 years old or over. Of the colored schools 41 per cent have passed the half-century mark. "In general," the investigators found, "most of the older buildings were built with little or no consideration given to what would happen if a serious fire were to break out when a building was filled with children." The lighting in these old structures is universally poor and the toilet rooms often insanitary. The deficiencies amount up to appalling totals.

More important than these well known facts are Dr. Strayer's recommendations that a $37,901,816 building program be launched immediately with funds to be borrowed interest free from the Treasury. "The backlog of neglect has reached a point," he says, "where the only alternatives are borrowing or gross neglect of the educational welfare of the children and youth." This newspaper has often expressed a similar view. The pay-as-you go system works well enough when no unusual demands arise. But no city can add 200,000 to its population in a few years, as Washington has done, without overtaxing its facilities and creating demands that must be met by extraordinary means of financing. We hope both Congress and the people will clearly understand the stark choice that must be made between borrowing and inexcusable neglect of education.

Back To Work

The strike of the East Coast longshoremen has been settled by a compromise agreement after a costly shipping tieup of two and a half weeks. On the West Coast, where ships have been immobilized since the beginning of September, an agreement has been reached with the striking longshoremen's representatives that will probably be accepted by the rank and file. But the shipowners have still to reach agreements with a number of other unions, and the head of the West Coast sailors' union, whose members did not strike, is making certain demands that may delay resumption of operations.

Relief at the prospect of a speedy reopening of our strike-bound ports is tempered by the knowledge that nothing constructive has been done to prevent a recurrence of strikes affecting the shipping industry when the new contracts expire. Particularly disturbing is the demonstrated inability of the East Coast leadership to control the actions of the rank and file of longshoremen who rejected one approved settlement. Brooklyn unions which voted against the latest agreement may cause further trouble. Quite as upsetting in its implications of a renewal of strife when the losses of the present conflict have been recouped or forgotten is the willingness of West Coast longshoremen to endure the privations of a strike of almost three months' duration under the fighting leadership of Harry Bridges.

The evidence indicates that, regardless of its cost to the public, the strike is a weapon of coercion that maritime unions will continue to use to gain their ends, or at least to obtain more than they believe to be possible through peaceful negotiation. So long as that attitude prevails, union leaders cannot guarantee peace along the waterfront. They must either follow the dictates of those they are supposed to lead or risk loss of their own jobs to more belligerent rivals. The lesson taught by the shipping tie-ups seems plain: they point to the need of prompt Government intervention in the future to avert national emergencies. To make such intervention effective the Government must have in reserve its own weapons of coercion to insure a continuance of work while disputed issues are being discussed.

Protecting Witnesses

If contempt citations against more than 40 persons who have refused to tell congressional committees whether they are Communists are dropped, as is now proposed, many thoughtful citizens will breathe a sigh of relief. And that sigh will involve neither sympathy for communism nor blindspot thinking as to the work of Soviet agents in the United States. There has always been an uneasiness about wholesale indictment of men for refusal to answer this question while the law is in its present uncertain state. Indeed, there appears to be no way in which those who have refused to answer on grounds of self-incrimination can be compelled to talk unless they have been given blanket immunity from prosecution for any crime that might be thus disclosed.

The Department of Justice is said to feel that contempt citations can be handled more judiciously after its cases against Communist Party leaders are disposed of. If these men are convicted, there may be a substantial basis for the self-incrimination pleas of various other Communists who have been called before congressional committees. But in any event men who are called before congressional committees have a right to know what their rights are. Many who have refused to testify have at least believed that they were standing on their rights. Wholesale indictments for contempt before the issues have been well clarified in the courts would scarcely be in keeping with the American sense of justice.

Two months ago we suggested that congressional committees ought to have power to decide in each case whether a reluctant witness should be given immunity from prosecution for anything that he might disclose. The Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Commission and various other administrative bodies already have this power. It enables them to decide in each case whether the witness' testimony is more important than possible prosecution of that witness for wrongdoing that might be exposed by his testimony. In many instances, obviously, the testimony proves to be more important than the right of prosecution. If witnesses went before congressional investigators with the knowledge that the committee could compel testimony by granting immunity on a selective basis, we think there would be less disposition to risk citations for contempt.

Let Congress arm its committees with this discretionary power. Let the Department of Justice press its test case against the Communist leaders to an early decision. Both Communists and citizens falsely tagged with the Commie label will then know better where they stand. Contempt citations can then be used as justified punishment for recalcitrant witnesses whose rights have been fully protected, and there will be less danger of slipping into haphazard persecution of a troublesome minority.

Unification Anomaly

Writing in the Saturday Evening Post, Secretary of Defense Forrestal presents a restrained picture of the progress of unification that is a good answer to some of the system's more impatient critics. Mr. Forrestal does not paint the lily. He recognizes the fundamental conflicts that still crop out among unreconstructed service partisans. He does not exaggerate the saving, either in money or personnel, that has been achieved. But he does list some substantial accomplishments in the sublimation of individual interests to the concept of over-all defense.

Among these he cites a unity of industrial mobilization planning as the most important single factor. This is the function of the Munitions Board. In the same connection Mr. Forrestal praises also the other work of the Munitions Board in streamlining procurement. He mentions individual instances of economy, such as the merger of air transport operations. He pays tribute to the broad policy work of the National Security Council in the Berlin crisis and recognizes the growing unity in research programs under the Research and Development Board. He does not overstate the case for the Joint Chiefs of Staff, but notes progress in overcoming the ignorance of each service about the others and reports "an increasingly closer meshing of the gears." His most hopeful words he reserves for the Joint Staff, that body of 100 officers to whom he looks to develop an allegiance not to merely one service, but to the military establishment as a whole.

Reading between the lines, one can discern Mr. Forrestal's dissatisfaction with one anachronism in the unification law. That is the existence of three subordinate service secretaries, not of Cabinet status, but vested with the authority to go over the head of the Secretary of Defense. This is a little veiled reference to the recent experience of the Air Force with Congress. Mr. Forrestal urges strongly that the military establishment be kept aloof from politics, and suggests that the Secretary of Defense be given the "right to hire" the three service Secretaries.

The end Mr. Forrestal seeks is desirable, but we think the method would give the Secretary of Defense altogether too much appointive power. A more logical approach to what is a very real problem would be to do what was suggested several times during the unification debate—namely, to reduce the three service Secretaries to the status of Assistant Secretaries of Defense. Over them, we believe, should be an Undersecretary charged with the job of coordination. This would remove the Secretary of Defense from the realm of intraservice squabbles and leave him free to concentrate on the many facets of over-all policy. The three service Secretaries were retained initially under the Unification Act to avoid reducing them in rank. It is hard to see how unification can succeed fully while this anomaly of authority remains.

Legislative Budget

Representative Cannon, who is in line for the chairmanship of the House Appropriations Committee, proposes to introduce a resolution at the beginning of the next session to repeal the legislative budget provisions of the Congressional Reorganization Act. True, the Eightieth Congress fell down on the job of trying to set an over-all figure for expenditures, but we do not believe that this failure discredits the legislative budget plan. It merely emphasizes the need for revision of the procedure laid down in the Reorganization Act.

It is generally conceded that the attempt to set an over-all spending ceiling as early as February 15 affords too little time for study of the executive budget proposals by the joint congressional committee. Moreover, it serves little purpose to announce an intention to limit spending to some fixed amount unless provision is made for limiting the totals carried in separate appropriations bills. Finally, under present conditions, rapid price changes make it extraordinarily difficult to estimate in advance the cost of Government operations in distant months. The Congress has, moreover, to recognize that unexpected outlays may be required to deal with international situations that affect our security. In other words, present-day economic and political instability makes budgeting decidedly a guessing game, since both expenditure and revenue estimates are likely to be affected by developments that cannot be foreseen.

Admitting all these difficulties, which incidentally hamper the preparation of the executive as well as the legislative budgets, there is need for an over-all survey by Congress of the spending program. By focusing attention on the cost of Government, it tends to impose a salutary restraint on expenditures. A legislative check of this kind should not, however, be undertaken with the purpose of effecting indiscriminate economies or offered as a substitute for the executive budget. What is needed is not rivalry between the legislative and executive branches of the Government in formulating budget plans, but cooperation in working out a program that Congress and the Administration will be prepared to support. The Washington Post has urged the need for a legislative council composed of congressional leaders to maintain informal contact with the White House for the purpose of establishing better relations and expediting legislation. This kind of consultation between members of Congress concerned with legislative budgeting and the executive branch would be most helpful. It would create the kind of atmosphere conducive to sober, studious examination of the Nation's financial needs and its resources for meeting them. Joint instead of divided responsibility is the first requisite of sound budget procedure. That we cannot have if the legislative budget plan is dropped in its entirety.

Cost Of Niggardliness

Some striking statistics to show the pitiful inadequacy of the benefits payable under the Federal old-age insurance system were presented by A. H. Raskin in the New York Times on Sunday. The formula for determining the scale of such benefits has remained "static" for the past 12 years, although the cost of living has risen 75 per cent. Under the existing system the highest benefit that a single individual without dependents can draw is slightly less than 45 dollars per month, while currently monthly benefits average just $25.17.

Meanwhile old-age relief grants have on the average more than doubled. The destitute aged of New York State, for example, receive nearly twice as much on the average as insurance beneficiaries, while in Colorado they draw three times as much. Hence it can be said that in some parts of the country it actually pays to be destitute. However, that is not the kind of old-age assistance that working men and women want. After a lifetime of toil, they should be able to look forward to a kind of support that is theirs by right—annuities that they have helped to pay for out of their savings and that are paid out without regard to their financial status. But unless Congress increases the scale of insurance benefits in the light of changed conditions, millions of American wage earners will ultimately be forced to rely on charity when their working days are over. For, with few exceptions, even the most thrifty are unable to save enough to provide for their old age, especially at a time when living costs are inflated and interest on savings abnormally low.

Realization of this hard fact is largely responsible for the current union drive to secure pension and other welfare benefits from private employers. This method of dealing with the problem of old-age dependence is unsatisfactory, partly because it is not comprehensive enough. The protection afforded by private pension systems is uncertain, and the scale of benefits depends upon union bargaining strength and the ability to pay of individual firms. The kind of standardized, secure system of old-age insurance that this country needs can be provided only under a Federal system of compulsory insurance. But unless the present system is reformed so as to provide an adequate scale of benefits and extended to cover millions of workers now unprotected, it will fail of its original purpose.

Fraternity Segregation

For his letter, "Fraternity Segregation," by Ernest K. Lindley, on November 22, democratic Americans extend their thanks. He displays the same courage that members of his fraternity (Phi Kappa Psi) at Amherst College have exhibited.

Fraternity segregation could easily have been ignored by any columnist on the pretext that more pressing articles demanded his time and energy, thereby avoiding any criticisms or objections to his position concerning this issue. I am sure that Mr. Lindley has expressed in words the attitude of all well thinking members of American fraternities and sororities.

Mr. Lindley is not only a gentleman grounded in the principles of the high ideals on which our country was founded, with the intestinal fortitude to express himself freely as an American citizen.

A country grows only as great as its people and this growth can only continue through recognition of equal opportunities for all its citizens.

JAMES L. MACK,
Washington.

In your letter column of November 22 you include some scurrilous remarks by Ernest K. Lindley which will be resented by millions of decent men and women who pride themselves upon their loyal citizenship and desirability as civic leaders and gentlemen and ladies.

Mr. Lindley says "any white American who cannot meet on the basis of social equality with members of other races is, in that respect, a liability to his country." From the subject matter he is particularly referring to social equality with the Negro.

Now, Mr. Lindley has the right to mingle socially with whom he pleases, but he approaches the danger point when he designates those who differ with him bad citizens and undesirable persons. He insults good people everywhere and helps create and increase any bad feeling which may exist toward the rights and privileges which the colored man deserves.

If a certain chapter of a national fraternity sees fit to invite a Negro member, that is its business. A fraternity, itself, might justly be termed "a bigoted and exclusive organization." But Mr. Lindley goes a little too far when he attempts to define an American and a good citizen.

Savings Bond Values

Mark Sullivan's November 23 column, entitled "Bad Dollars For Good," appears to overlook some basic economics.

He points out that a United States savings bond that was purchased in 1945, if cashed today, results in less dollar value, purchasing power having since decreased. Therefore, he contends that the Truman Administration should make a necessary adjustment in dollar value when cashing bonds.

Savings bonds are still being sold today. Since they are now purchased with dollars representing fewer working hours needed to earn them, actually, a bond costs less dollars today than in 1945.

Furthermore, savings bonds are theoretically purchased to be redeemed at the end of 10 years. The economic pendulum might conceivably swing back to the 1945 level within several years.

Therefore, Mr. Sullivan's comments might almost be construed as an appeal to cash savings bonds at a most disadvantageous moment. Had price control policies not been scuttled, Mr. Sullivan's confusing column would not have been even partially correct.

Cardozo Champions

The loyal readers of The Washington Post at Cardozo High were greatly chagrined by a sin of omission on the part of our favorite paper in your issue of November 24.

We read about Central's great victory for the city championship and saw a great cut of their happy faces. We learned McKinley was in a three-way tie for second. We found out George Washington High was to meet Washington and Lee.

In vain we looked for a word—even a word—about Cardozo which had just completed a record season and also won the city championship. (One city but two championships. That's the way we do in Washington).

It is an additional ironic note that the lead in Shirley Povich's column was a tribute to Levi Jackson, newly elected Yale captain, a Negro.

Who knows but that one of those lads on the team ignored by The Washington Post may one day captain a team of one of the great universities whose faculty members do not have to jog the local editors for newsprint?

"Crusade In Europe"

Having followed Crusade in Europe since the first installment I can assure you I was very much surprised to read the article by the London Sunday Times' military correspondent in the November 22 issue.

If he would take the trouble to read and study the following books he would find some very startling facts: Lucky Forward by Col. Robert S. Allen; Top Secret by Ralph M. Ingersoll; War As I Knew It by Gen. George S. Patton. Then read and compare Normandy to the Baltic by Montgomery of El Alamein and Operation Victory by Maj. Gen. Sir Francis de Guigand.

Crusade in Europe is outstanding due to the number of pulled punches. Studying the above six books caused me to arrive at the following facts: Gen. Omar N. Bradley is the possessor of a brilliant mind and is selfless and humble to a very great degree. The general also has the outstanding ability to express or convey his thoughts in matchless phraseology. His speech in Massachusetts on November 11, 1948, is one of his masterpieces.

Gen. George S. Patton is found to be a man with a clashing air, an indomitable will and a razor-sharp brain given to expressing himself very lucidly.

If traits of character, such as intolerance, arrogance, insubordination, insufferable conceit and glaring stupidity, are "musts" of good generalship, then we find Montgomery, who possesses all four to a very great degree, to be far superior to Napoleon and the good Lord's gift to the democracies during the past war.

Help For Chiang Kai-Shek

To refuse to aid Chiang Kai-shek because of the corruption of his government is to imply that some other regime would be more honest, which is only wishful thinking on the part of people who have merely read books on China and visited there. I don't blame Secretary Marshall and others for throwing up their hands in disgust after struggling with China's situation for a few years.

Well do I remember as a child in China being alarmed every now and then by my father's remark, "I'm fed up. I'll go back to America and dig ditches for a living." That was 30 years ago and he is still in China because he believes that with help and time the Chinese can work out their own salvation. But there is nothing to indicate that a Communist government would bring an end to corruption, confusion and civil war in China.

What the Communists would bring to an end is the work of our governmental, economic, medical, charitable and religious missions in China which, reinforced by superior Chinese, have very slowly but very surely been making headway toward the solution of China's fundamental problems. They have produced a new generaion of Chinese who are few in number but far-reaching in effect. Given a few more generations of time they could go a long way toward relieving their people of the hunger, illiteracy and desparate poverty which are the source of corruption in China.

In case of a Communist victory, on the other hand, the ablest Chinese and most effective foreigners sooner or later would have to leave China or cease their efforts; for that has always been the case where Communists have seized power. Communism is no longer the great deliverer it once promised to be. An intrinsic part of its doctrine is the insignificance of the individual, while the whole emphasis of democracy and the rebirth of a nation in China is the value of the individual. The Communists could not permit this idea to continue to gain in China any more than they can tolerate it elsewhere.

If we refuse to give Chiang substantial aid now we are discarding some of the most heroic people and projects this world has seen and throwing away the chance to win 400 million friends and influence that many people.

We cannot hope that a resistance movement would survive in a Communist China and eventually restore China to the democratic way of life, for the Chinese do not have a democratic tradition that goes deep into the lives of the people. Once under Communist control China would become the core of an effort to turn the might of Asia's millions against the rest of us.

The cost of helping Chiang should not ruin us or the European Program—we have fed millions of Chinese on an amount of money that would feed only thousands of us, and the effect of other aid is far beyond the value of the money in this country.

There is no alternative to helping Chiang or helping the Communists. Even those most disgusted with Chiang can point to no other leaders or group who have any hope of resisting the Communists—all they propose is that we leave China like rats abandoning ship, and hope against hope that Chinese Communists will be different.

We do not need to know all the intricacies of Chinese history in order to know what we should do to help. We only need to be realistic and practical. If we are going to hope for democracy we must practice it now by telling our leaders what we want.

The Fine Frenzy

THE LETTERS OF EDGAR ALLAN POE: Edited by John Ward Ostrom. (Harvard University Press, 2 vols. $10.)

Bene qui latuit, bene vixit, as the fellow said; and surely among the many blessings of an obscure life is the knowledge that one's private correspondence will never excite the cupidity of rich collectors or the professional lusts of critics and scholars. As far as I can judge, the principal advantage of compilations like this one is to warn the young man who is persuaded of his own genius to commit nothing to paper that he might deem too intimate to be shared with some unborn professor of English and exposed to the scorn of any reader who has read about peace of mind. Poor Poe was scarcely a psychiatrist's glammor boy; his emotional life seems to have been chronically disordered, and he speaks more than once of having crossed over the line into downright madness. Here and there indeed throughout these letters he appears to exhibit all the symptoms in the book: delusions of grandeur and of persecution, phobias and fixations; but then it might be asked whether, if a record were kept of every idle word, each of us would not do the same. Besides, madness has from the beginning been recognized as the occupational disease of poets, and there is reason to suppose that Poe deliberately cultivated it, that is to say, preferred for professional reasons the life of fantasy to that of reality. "Men," he wrote, "have called me mad; but the question is not settled whether madness is not the loftiest intelligence."

I dare say that to many these letters will seem to confirm the judgment of Poe, reported to have been delivered here the other evening by Mr. T. S. Eliot, as a person whose somatic development was arrested in adolescence. But from this it does not of necessity follow that a fondness for Poe is the sign of an immature taste, for, as Mr. Eliot himself has said somewhere, we ought not to confuse the poetry and the poet. To decide for ourselves the merit of a particular poem, or of the poems as a whole, we do not, it seems to me, need to know very much about the poet's relation to his foster-father, or about the nature of his passion for a particular woman, or the character of his domestic life, or about his adventures with whisky and laudanum, or about other matters equally interesting and irrelevant. What we need is an objective norm of value. That is, we must ask first ourselves what we expect in a poem, and then whether or not we find it in the poem under the question, after which we may go into the more difficult technical problem of discovering how the poet managed to give us, or why he failed to give us, whatever it was that we expected to find. Now the classical theory of poetry is that it should be an imitation of nature, or to give it the Greek name, mimesis. Poe rejected this theory altogether; for him a poem was something related only to itself and its content is to be determined wholly by its form. It need not mean anything in particular, indeed it is better if it does not. Poetry has nothing to do with reality, but only with beauty and the purpose of a poem is not to embody a truth, but to evoke a mood which is dictated by the form of the poem. The pleasure to be derived from poetry is always indefinite, and independent alike of abstract idea and concrete image. The poet should strive to reproduce in his work those scarce intelligible fancies which inhabit the subliminal layers of the mind somewhere between consciousness and sleep, and thereby arouse "a certain petulant, impatient sorrow at our inability to grasp now, here on earth, at once and forever those divine and rapturous joys, of which through the poem or through music, we attain to but brief and indeterminate glimpses." Since this sorrow is most easily awakened by music infused with poetical fancy, language must be employed primarily for its musical values. Thus the only poetry recognized as such by Poe is the lyrical. And since the poetic pleasure cannot be long sustained, poems must be short.

These theories appear to have been inspired largely by a revolt against the excessive didacticism of the New England poets, especially Longfellow. As is well known, Poe had little or no immediate influence on his American contemporaries, but his doctrines had profound and lasting effects abroad after they were discovered by Charles Baudelaire. It is to Poe's theories of poetic diction that the obscurity of modern poetry, which frightens away so many well intentioned readers, may be traced. Among his devices was that of synesthesia, as the psychologists call it, which is to say the transposition of sense categories, afterwards carried to such extradinary lengths by decadents like Rimbaud and by the symbolists like Mallarm . Poe is also sometimes credited with having introduced the satanic principle into poetry, of which the decadents made so much; but it seems not unlikely that his preoccupation with demon lovers, corpses and ghouls was as much a heritage from the Gothic tradition as the product of his morbid personality. Now the extraordinary thing about all this is that Mr. Eliot's own indebtedness to the decadents and symbolists has been often remarked so that his repudiation of Poe may seem in a way to border on parricide. But Mr. Eliot's real concern, as I take it, is to restore the didactic principle, on the ground that poetry must have a moral as well as an aesthetic value. Meaning, therefore, must be restored at all costs to poetry even at the sacrifice of music; but unfortunately the meanings that Mr. Eliot wishes to restore reflect the theories of the new semanticism, which probably explains why the perplexed reader, untutored in this science, can make little more of Mr. Eliot's poetry than he can make of Israfel or Ulalume.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph And Stewart Alsop

Marshal Beria's Priority

THE MOVE to use the Secretaryship of Defense as a political plum can only be judged in terms of the central unpleasant fact of our time. Before very long, the Soviet Union may be halfway down the hard road to producing a people's democratic atomic bomb. Six to 15 years was the period originally allotted. And "sometime in 1952" is still the deadline after which the most conservative American experts say we must be ready for the Kremlin's Bikini.

This is because one fact stands out from the conflicting evidence concerning the Soviet atomic energy project. The project has absolute first priority. It is under the personal direction of Marshal Beria, the dread police chief of the Soviet empire. And whether Swiss machinery must be dearly bought with foreign exchange, or 10,000 slave laborers are needed the next morning, Marshal Beria has only to sign the order.

This does not mean, of course, that ordinary but costly mistakes, or the inevitable cumbersomeness of the Soviet system, may not delay the project far beyond the accepted deadline. Much time has already been lost by the Kremlin. Even the greatest of Soviet physicists, Kapitza, was prevented from exploring nuclear fission during the war. Generalissimo Stalin was informed of the existence of the atomic bomb at Potsdam in 1945. During that year, any German scientist could get a free meal ticket from the British and Americans by claiming to be a physicist. But it was not until 1946 that the Soviets began to round up a prize herd of these rare human cattle. The year 1946 is accepted as the moment when Marshal Beria's priority was given to him.

THE ABSOLUTENESS of the priority is mainly gauged by the one form of reliable intelligence the Kremlin cannot keep from the West—intelligence concerning the working of the European uranium deposits. There are a considerable number of these, but only the Czech deposits, centered at Joachimsthal, were formerly considered sufficiently valuable to be mined.

Now every small pocket of uraniferous ore, in eastern Germany and throughout eastern Europe, is being mined intensively. The most terrible threat against any political dissident in the Soviet sphere is that he will be sent to the mines. The reports of conditions in these mines recall the stories of the Spanish empire's holocausts of whole nations of Indians to secure the silver and gold of the New World. Under the whips of the MVD, hundreds of thousands of Germans and Czechs are, where necessary, digging the ore from the earth with their bare hands, until they drop with exhaustion and are cast aside.

There is, obviously, a glimmer of light in this black picture. If the Kremlin is willing to pay a human life for every pound of European uraniferous ore, it must mean that larger and more profitable ore deposits have not yet been brought into production elsewhere in the Soviet empire.

There are also other encouraging factors. One such was the recent denunciation of four Russian physicists. One of the usual Soviet Communist mouthpieces excoriated them for their "agnostic assertion that lack of precision in the behavior of atomic particles is unavoidable." If Marxist dialectics are to dominate the Soviet atomic energy project as well as Soviet biological research, we can expect Marshal Beria's triple-A priority to be useless.

THE TALE of the single escape from the Soviet atomic laboratories also carries a little hope. This man was in the top flight of captive German physicists. While he and his colleagues were given every facility and luxury, they were entirely cut off from contact with any knowledgeable Russian. The MVD flatfoots who ruled over them required that they work. But since the flatfoots knew no more of nuclear physics than the average policeman, the German scientists could have written novels in their work hours if they chose.

Nonetheless, the fact of Marshal Beria's priority remains outstanding. Beside this fact must be placed the further fact that Marshal Beria's organization can avoid much wasteful experiment by reading the American Smyth report.

We have shown the way. The Soviets have enormous engineering obstacles to overcome. They must make an immense investment. But the Americans who have seen the job done here believe that the Russians can do the job, too, if they are reasonably sensible. This should not merely rule out political trading with vital defense appointments. The need to be ready for 1952 should also condition our entire foreign and defense policy, infusing the whole with a deep sense of urgency and purpose.

They sped to that area, located the plane by its noise, then lighted up one of the flares police cars carry for marking danger spots on streets and highways at night. Hall said later he saw a flare being waved and figured it was a signal from someone trying to help.

Hall said he waggled his wings in an attempt at acknowledging the signal, then followed overhead as the flare moved along, circling frequently as the little ship outraced the automobile. Hall said ice was forming in his wings.

Wheeler and DeVries drove cautiously through the storm along Viers Mill rd. to Rockville, then over a cut-off into Rockville pike and finally came to the airport with the private plane following doggedly overhead, carefully avoiding several radio towers in that area. At the field, Hall said, it was a simple matter for an experienced pilot to let down through the sleet.

Hall and Nagle work together as instrument makers at Johns Hopkins Research Laboratories, Silver Spring, and Hall occasionally delivers Ercoupes for the factory. The ceiling was about 9000 feet when they left Erco field at Riverdale, he said, planning to fly over Nagle's home. Hall said he knows the territory well and was not actually lost, but he wasn't sure he could have found the airport without assistance from the flares.

Straight, a wartime B-17 pilot, was accompanied by Ray Jamieson of New York, veterans' representative of the AVC; Cyril King, a New York staff member, and Ann Ewing, delegate to the convention and a Wave on temporary duty with the Navy.

Straight said he was 2½ hours out of Cleveland when he hit the snow squalls. He is a member of the AVC's national planning committee. He was flying a single-engine Navion.

4-H Leadership Contest Won by Veteran, Coed

Chicago, Nov. 28 (AP).—An Army veteran from Texas and a blonde coed from Arkansas were named winners of the National 4-H leadership contest today.

They are Alvin G. Davis, Post, Tex., a 4-H-er for eight years, and Alice Gilliaum, 20, Newport, Ark., who has been in club work 10 years.

Each was awarded a $200 college scholarship, an all-expense trip to the twenty-seventh National 4-H club congress, which opened here today, and a silver trophy. The prizes were given by Edward Foss Wilson, president of Wilson & Co., meat packers.

Davis has been local, county and district 4-H club president, and junior and senior leader.

Runner-up in the contest, each of whom received a $100 scholarship, were John W. Wysong, 16, Forrest Hill, Md., and Mary Putnam, 19, Monroe, Me.

Turn Of The Tide?

By Mark Sullivan

The Current Ebb In Prices

THERE HAS BEEN during recent weeks a drop, very slight, in prices of food and some other goods. This has led to argument, prophecy and wish about the broad question, whether cost of living has reached and passed its peak, or would resume.

For some who hope or argue that the peak is passed, rely much on the bumper crops, in some cases the largest on record, of grain, especially corn, and some other forms of food. Normally this condition could be relied upon, especially when the bumper crops coincide with increased production of food in countries where it has been prostrated by war. We have bumper crops in America and at the same time have less demand for our crops from abroad. Normally that combination should result in lower prices of food; historically it has.

Yet those who rely on bumper crops to bring about lower cost of living, while they have precedent and much else on their side, need to bear in mind the part that Government has come to have in prices. During three years past there have been bumper crops of potatoes, but this did not prevent the Government from being successful in energetic steps it took to prevent the price of potatoes from going down. The Government is now taking steps similarly formidable to support the prices of grain. Those who hope for lower food prices, or argue that they will come, must assume that the forces of nature can resist even the power of government. Conceivably that could be.

OTHERS BASE THEIR HOPES on the people. They assume that the people, when they fully understand that the Government prevents prices of food from going down, will change the Government. But just the opposite of that took place in the recent election. Much more than any other issues, the candidate who was victorious held out two assurances. One was to farmers, that price support of crops would be continued, with increase of facilities for the mechanism of it. The other principal assurance was to the group who, with farmers, have a twin part in cost of living. To labor Mr. Truman held out assurance of more consideration. The "more" is likely to express itself, directly or indirectly, in higher wage rates, which in most cases would be followed by higher prices of manufactured goods, as has happened in the past three years of the Truman Administration.

In the welter of speculation about the future course of prices is one fairly tangible expectation. So far as there can be certainty about any future condition, it is apparent that the country has ahead of it a widespread raise in wage rates. Raises are already under way. Since October 1 there has been more than a score of raises, most of them local, but in the aggregate covering a large number of workers and affecting such industries as oil refining, rubber, leather, farm implements, glass, telephone communications. Last week saw a raise in the shipping industry on both coasts.

These reflected a current already under way. Recently has come a demand on a Nation-wide scale for what is called a "fourth round" of raises, the fourth, that is, since the end of the war and the beginning of Mr. Truman's Presidency. The demand was vocal at the recent national conventions of CIO and AFL, which include unions in most of the country's major industries. At the AFL convention, apparent sympathy for the demand was likely to be inferred by labor from a statement of Secretary of Labor Tobin which, as reported by the United Press, was to the effect that conditions call for a raise to 16 million workers.

IF THE FOURTH ROUND of wage-rate raises takes place, there will be a new spurt in the wage-price spiral. How this operated during the past three years was expressed in a report dealing with inflation by the official Council of Economic Advisers to the President last July: "The inflationary effects have been multiplied through the price-wage spiral . . . Substantial wage increases which have often been made to catch up with previous price increases, have been accompanied in turn or promptly followed by substantial raises in the prices of industrial goods."

Increases in prices of manufactured goods would mean of course higher prices paid by farmers for what they buy. These, under the price-support law, would automatically bring higher support prices for farm crops. Higher costs of food thus engendered would in turn become the basis of yet further demands by labor for raises in wage-rates. Thus would come a new upward spurt of the wage-price spiral.

Moscow Radio Assails AFL For 'Warmongering' Policy

London, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Russia today criticized the American Federation of Labor for paying too much attention to foreign policy and not enough to "raising the living standard of the American working people and improving their conditions of work."

Moscow radio, in an English language broadcast picked up here by the Soviet monitor, said the AFL did more warmongering at its recent Cincinnati convention than did even the United States Government and Wall Street.

"It would be hard for American expansionists to find more faithful and obedient servants than reactionary AFL leadership," the broadcast charged.

"American ruling circles try to make out that United States policy is one of peace and they spread all sorts of stories that they cannot reach agreement with the Soviet Union," Moscow radio said.

"But Green and Company (William Green, AFL president) proclaim at the top of their voices there must be no direct negotiations between the Soviet Union and the United States, and as to sending an American mission of peace to Moscow—they won't even consider such a thing.

"While Vandenberg (Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, R., Mich.) by the sweat of his brow is busy forming an aggressive North Atlantic bloc behind the American people's back, the reactionary AFL leadership demands that the United States immediately enter an aggressive military alliance of west European countries and that it immediately supply these countries with armaments."

Moscow said the AFL wants Secretary of State George C. Marshall replaced "by a more reactionary leader," wants revision of the United Nations Charter, the Yalta and Potsdam agreements and supports the Bernard Baruch atomic control plan—which the Soviet Union opposes.

Tobacco Markets Open Today for Virginia Growers

Virginia fire-cured and burley tobacco markets open today with experts predicting a smaller movement than in 1947.

Four fire-cured markets, Lynchburg, Bedford, Blackstone and Farmville, will begin buying today, a week earlier than usual, to give growers three weeks' sales before Christmas.

In Abingdon, focal point of the burley market, 3,500,000 pounds of burley tobacco was on the floor for today's sales.

'Moderate' Southern Group Seeks Civil Rights Delay

By the United Press

A group of "moderate" Southern Congressmen is prepared to ask President Truman to hold fire on his controversial civil rights program until spring, it was revealed yesterday.

They believe the Senate will be deadlocked for weeks if Mr. Truman asks the new Congress in January for immediate passage of antipoll tax and antilynching measures plus a fair employment bill.

Here is the line of thought being pursued by those working toward a compromise:

1. If Mr. Truman refrains from prodding Congress on civil rights for at least a few months, tempers will cool, the Democratic Party breach caused by States Rights Democrats will heal, and Congress can do business as usual

2. Let the Administration settle for a constitutional amendment—requiring ratification by three fourths of the States—banning poll taxes in Federal elections rather than insist on a "quick" remedy by Federal law.

3. Confine application of antilynching legislation to those States which do not have "adequate" State laws punishing mob violence, or draft the law so that "gang slayings" in Northern States also would be subject to Federal intervention.

4. Drop Federal legislation to end racial bias in hiring and employment.

The group determined to work for that course believes such a program would fulfill Democratic campaign promises and still preserve a good portion of party unity in Congress.

Arlington Group To Support Miller

Formation of an Arlington committee to support the "anti-machine" Virginia gubernatorial candidacy of Francis Picken Miller of Albemarle County was announced yesterday.

Miller

The committee will be headed by former State Senator Frank L. Ball, former County Board chairman, and Edmund D. Campbell, who will serve as co-chairmen. Members include "old-line" Democrats and independents.

In announcing formation of the group, Campbell asserted that Miller's candidacy "affords Virginians the first real opportunity they have had in this generation to liberalize their government and restore its control to the people."

Campbell said active Miller organizations soon would be set up in each of the county's 21 voting precincts.

Miller, who moved from Fairfax to Albemarle County in 1946, recently announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor, subject to next August's primary. Miller served as State Delegate from Fairfax County from 1938 to 1941.

Va. Auto Inspections End Tuesday Night

'Ike' Saw Rhine Crossing From Church Tower

able to see some of the action. A number of our planes were hit by antiaircraft, generally, however, only after they had dropped their loads of paratroopers. As they swung away from the battle area they seemed to hover over a spot where antiaircraft fire was particularly accurate. Operation Varsity, the name given to the airborne phase of this attack, was the most successful airborne operation we carried out during the war.

During the morning I met the Prime Minister with Feld Marshal Brooke. Mr. Churchill always seemed to find it possible to be near the scene of action when any particularly important operation was to be launched. On that morning he was delighted as indeed were all of us. He exclaimed over and over, "My dear general, the German is whipped. We've got him. He is all through."

Churchill Crosses Rhine in an LCM

About noon of March 24 it was necessary for me to rush down to Bradley's headquarters to confer on important phases of his own operations. After I left, the Prime Minister persuaded the local commander to take him across the Rhine in an LCM. He undoubtedly derived an intense satisfaction from putting his foot on the eastern bank of Germany's traditional barrier.

Possibly he felt the act was symbolic of the final defeat of an enemy who had forced Britain's back to the wall five years before. However, had I been present he would never have been permitted to cross the Rhine that day.

In the meantime events farther south had been proceeding swiftly. Bradley's first purpose was to secure a firm lodgment in the Frankfurt region from which an advance in strength would be undertaken toward Kassel. At this latter point we expected to join up with Montgomery's attack on the north of the Ruhr and so complete the envelopment of that area.

On the 26th of March the advance out of the Remagen bridgehead began. The V Corps, now under Maj. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner, thrust rapidly to the southeast and overran Limburg. These great converging thrusts by Hodges and Patton completed the demoralization of the enemy in that region.

Still farther south, in the Sixth Army Group, Patch's Seventh Army joined the attack. General Haislip's XV Corps, of the Seventh Army, forced a crossing of the river near Worms on March 26. Enemy detachments at the water's edge presented stubborn opposition but it was quickly overcome and the XV Corps completed the crossing on the 27th.

Seventh Army Gains, Captures Mannheim

The Seventh Army immediately took up the advance and after linking up with the Third Army pushed on quickly to capture Mannheim. The final crossing of the Rhine against resistance was made by the French army at Philippsburg April 1. From there the French were subsequently to strike southeastward in the direction of Stuttgart and clear the eastern bank of the Rhine all the way to the Swiss border.

We owed much to Hitler. There is no question that his general staff, had it possessed a free hand in the field of military operations, would have foreseen certain disaster on the western bank and would have pulled back the defending forces, probably no later than the beginning of January.

Even Hitler, fanatic that he was, must have had lucid moments in which he could not have failed to see that the end was in sight. He was writing an ending to a drama that would far exceed in tragic climax anything that his beloved Wagner ever conceived.

I already knew of the Allied political agreements that divided Germany into post-hostilities occupational zones. The north-south line allotted by that decision to the British and American nations ran from the vicinity of Lubeck, at the eastern base of the Danish peninsula, generally southward to the town of Eisenach and on southward to the Austrian border.

Future Zones Did Not Influence Conquest

This future division of Germany did not influence our military plans for the final conquest of the country. Military plans, I believed, should be devised with the single aim of speeding victory; by later adjustment troops of the several nations could be concentrated into their own national sectors.

A natural objective beyond the Ruhr was Berlin. It was politically and psychologically important as the symbol of remaining German power. I decided, however, that it was not the logical or the most desirable objective for the forces of the Western Allies.

When we stood on the Rhine in the last week of March we were 300 miles from Berlin, with the obstacle of the Elbe still 200 miles to our front.

The Russian forces were firmly established on the Oder with a bridgehead on its western bank only 30 miles from Berlin. Our logistic strength, which included an ability to deliver to forward elements some 2000 tons of supplies by air transport every day, would sustain our spearheads thrusting across Germany.

But if we should plan for a power crossing of the Elbe, with the single purpose of attempting to invest Berlin, two things would happen. The first of these was that in all probability the Russian forces would be around the city long before we could reach there. The second was that to sustain a strong force at such a distance from our major bases along the Rhine would have meant the practical immobilization of units along the remainder of the front. This I felt to be more than unwise; it was stupid.

With these several considerations in mind I determined that as soon as the Twelfth and Twenty-first Army Groups could complete the Ruhr envelopment our next major advances would comprise three essential parts.

Bradley to Strike Across Germany

The first would be a powerful thrust by Bradley directly across the center of Germany.

The second and third parts of the general plan visualized, following upon Bradley's junction with the Russians somewhere along the Elbe, a rapid advance on each of our flanks. The northern thrust would cut off Denmark; the southern one would push into Austria and overrun the mountains west and south of that country.

This general plan was presented to Generalissimo Stalin.

Under the arrangement made in January and approved by the Combined Chiefs of Staff, I thought that I was completely within the scope of my own authority and responsibility in communicating this plan to the Generalissimo. However, we quickly found that Prime Minister Churchill seriously objected to my action.

He disagreed with the plan and held that, because the campaign was now approaching its end, troop maneuvers had acquired a political significance that demanded the intervention of political leaders in the development of broad operational plans. He apparently believed that my message to the Generalissimo had exceeded my authority to communicate with Moscow only on purely military matters.

He was greatly disappointed and disturbed because my plan did not first throw Montgomery forward with all the strength I could give him from the American forces, in the desperate attempt to capture Berlin before the Russians could do so. He sent his views to Washington.

The Prime Minister knew, of course, that regardless of the distance the Allies might advance to the eastward, he and the President had already agreed that the British and American occupation zones would be limited on the east by a line 200 miles west of Berlin. Consequently his great insistence upon using all our resources in the hope of assuring the arrival of the Western Allies in Berlin ahead of the Russians must have been based on the conviction that great prestige and influence for the Western Allies would later derive from this achievement.

The outcome of all this was that we went ahead with our own plan. So earnestly did I believe in the military soundness of what we were doing that my intimates on the staff knew I was prepared to make an issue of it.

The final break-up of the Nazi armies presented General Eisenhower with extraordinarily difficult problems, both of military strategy and of diplomacy. He was still directing great power thrusts toward Berlin when American troops first met the Red Army on the Elbe.

On April 12, he visited General Patton's fast-moving divisions, inspected a salt mine filled with Nazi treasure, saw his first horror camp, near Gotha, and finally went to bed at midnight. A few minutes later General Patton and General Bradley walked back into his room to tell him that President Roosevelt had just died.

These are the events that fill tomorrow's installment of "Crusade in Europe," which will be published in this newspaper.

British Aide Protests Criticism of Ike's Book

London, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Sir Frederick Morgan, wartime deputy chief of staff to Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, wrote to the Sunday Times today protesting the newspaper's criticism of "Crusade in Europe."

Last Sunday the Sunday Times' military correspondent accused Eisenhower of "lying" in some of his references to Field Marshal Montgomery. He said Eisenhower was trying to show the war was won entirely by Americans. Morgan said:

"I believe that in due time when opportunity has been given for General Eisenhower's book to be widely read, it will be found that no harm whatever will have been done to the vital cause of Anglo-American friendship by anything General Eisenhower has written."

Dividends from Saving

It does not matter why you start saving. Or what you save for. There are almost as many special reasons as there are people who save. And very few start saving simply to teach themselves habits of thrift. But the habit of saving, and the peace of mind that a growing account give, are two important dividends a Savings Account brings.

woods, but found no one. It was hours later when they heard Mrs. Coslett had been wounded.

After an informal investigation by Third Infantry officers yesterday, an Army public relations spokesman said:

"Private O'Connor is one of the finest soldiers of a company picked for good-soldierly qualities. Guards at the Tomb have standing orders to protect it against desecration, as a most hallowed spot, with their lives if necessary. Use of a rifle by infantrymen on guard duty is an Army tradition.

"The M1 rifle can kill at 1000 yards. A carbine or a .45-caliber pistol might not prove as effective as an M1 if a gang of hoodlums, for instance, were to descend suddenly upon the Tomb. Any other weapon would be a distinct departure from custom. Tests to be made Monday should determine if the bullet that wounded Mrs. Coslett is the same that was fired from Private O'Connor's rifle. There probably will be a thorough investigation into every phase of this matter."

Second Phase of Spain's Election Is Completed

Madrid, Spain, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Representatives of national capital and labor syndicates voted today for another one third of the nation's municipal councilmen in the second phase of Spain's first election since the civil war.

Councilmen elected today, along with the one third elected last week by the direct vote of heads of families, will meet later to elect the remaining one third.

London Correspondent Deported From Burma

Rangoon, Burma, Nov. 28 (A.P.).—It was officially reported today that Alexander Campbell, correspondent for the London Daily Mail, has been deported by the Burmese government.

Campbell was arrested September 18, accused of connection with the Karen revolt on the northeast frontier near Siam. The government announced October 5 that the revolt had collapsed.

Traffic Argument Sets Off Chain Of Misfortunes

Pittsburgh, Nov. 28 (A.P.).—Two autos, their brakes screeching, nearly collided at an intersection today, but that wasn't the end of the incident. Before it was over, one man was shot, another burned in the eye, and five persons arrested.

Police Lieut. Joseph Kohnke told this story in Morals Court:

Five occupants of one machine approached the lone occupant of the second car and began beating him. George Heth, 41-year-old Detroit truck driver, went to his aid.

A shot rang out and Heth fell, a bullet hole in his leg. As he collapsed he grabbed a lighted truck flare and it jabbed the face of one of the participants in the argument.

By this time police had arrived. They took Heth to a hospital, where he was reported in good condition tonight.

D. C. Education Officials Hail School Construction Report

specific recommendations of the report, Fowler said he thought Dr. Strayer and his colleagues had done "a mighty fine job on this first section."

Amount "Not Astonishing"

"The amount he indicates as necessary to bring school needs up to top levels is not so astonishing," said the budget officer, "in view of the fact that we have not been able to keep up with our needs and the shifts in population, due to depression, war and our general finances. We anticipated that it would be costly."

President Leon Chatelain, jr., of the Board of Trade, declared he thought the borrowing of funds from the Federal Government for school capital outlay "would be a fine way to do it, if we can also get the sales tax."

"The general recommendations for new construction follow very closely on those advocated by our education committee," he said, "but the question comes up of how we're going to pay for it. In other words, even if we do get a loan, we also have to pay it off, with or without interest, and we believe the sales tax would be the way to do it and balance our budget."

Chatelain said the Strayer report would be studied by the Board of Trade's education committee, which last May recommended a 44-million-dollar Federal loan for school construction, and by the group's finance committee, which cut the figure to $10,418,000.

Indications that the report would receive sympathetic study from the board's education committee came from its chairman, John M. Howard, yesterday. He said he thought the school recommendations of Dr. Strayer "very closely parallel" those of his committee.

As for the amount of necessary financing, he declared, Dr. Strayer's 38 million dollars and the Board of Trade's final "compromise" last year of $12,559,000 for its school construction program figure, were not actually far apart. The Board of Trade's figure, he said, would not mean one-third of Dr. Strayer's program, but the same or similar construction, with the financing extended over a longer period of time.

Financing Plan Approved

Howard, who said he agreed "100 per cent" with the idea of financing the capital expense by a Government loan, will refer the Strayer report today to the co-chairmen of his subcommittee, Louis F. Bohraus and Don P. McAdoo. The subcommittee spent more than a year in the school study which resulted in Howard's report last May.

While John H. Connaughton, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, declined to comment yesterday on the report, enthusiastic assent was voiced by Civic Federation President Woolsey W. Hall.

"This fine report is grounded in wisdom and should be carried out," said Hall, "if we don't want a generation of dummies graduating from our schools. It's not the fault of the school board, but of the Budget Bureau and Congress, that our schools have been neglected scandalously.

Low Rating Indorsed

"I was particularly delighted that Dr. Strayer brought out the low rating of the Terrell Junior High School," Hall continued, referring to the "score" of 228 that the retired Columbia University education professor gave the Negro junior high school. An "ideal" school would receive a rating of 1000.

Engineer Commissioner Young, who emphasized he was neither approving nor disapproving Dr. Strayer's recommendations for school construction and for financing, said it would take a year to design the recommended buildings and acquire some of the sites needed. Actual construction would take another three years, he said, pointing out that there is a "saturation point" in the number of contractors available for the work involved.

Britain Asks Mexico To Discuss Air Pact

Mexico City, Nov. 28 (AP)—The British government has asked Mexico to discuss an aviation treaty, the Department of Communications and Public Works said today.

Department sources said it is believed one British request will be to extend the British South American Airways service to Mexico City. The company now operates a passenger and express route to Havana, Cuba, via Lisbon.

One on the Aisle—

'Red Gloves' Pack An Early Punch

By Richard L. Coe

ALREADY A HOT "Red Gloves" battle is under way, though the Jean-Paul Sartre play starring Charles Boyer doesn't open in New York until Saturday night.

This is the play which recently had a week at Ford's Theater, Baltimore, and since has been ironing out wrinkles in Boston. In Paris Sartre has filed suit against his publisher-agent, Louis Nagle, because, he claims the American version is "a vulgar common melodrama with an anti-Communist bias." The French court has appointed an administrator to supervise Sartre's contract with Nagal, but it doesn't look as though this will hold up the American production.

Not having seen the original Paris production or the still current and presumably okayed London version, I don't know what the differences are. I do know the play's running time is a good hour less on this side of the Atlantic.

The transoceanic battle arose from friends' letters to Sartre telling the author about the play's performances in Baltimore and New Haven. These people seemed to think that it was "somewhat different" from the original play and that it had been "turned into an anti-Communist melodrama."

Storm Not Unexpected

This leaping-to-conclusions is precisely what this reporter suggested would happen in his review of the play. I wrote: "'Red Gloves' is more than the story of a schism in the Communist Party (the word Communist is never once mentioned in the play) which undoubtedly is how the play will be loosely described once it hits the Nation's headlines. It is a reflection of a continent's despair and of its hereditary and economic rulers, both of whom are sharply characterized in the play by a prince and an industrial opportunist."

What has happened, of course, is that "Red Gloves" is playing to a far more comfortable people than it did in a continent where revolution is just beneath the surface. The average American reaction to communism is, "We don't want it period."

This was brought home to me in discussing the play with a young college chap. It was his contention that the heroic role Boyer is playing was inherently evil. He was not only a revolutionist, in my friend's eyes, he was a Communist and therefore thoroughly evil. That was not Sartre's contention at all, at least to my way of thinking. But it appears that a lot of people will be agreeing with my young friend, which is what the Sartre fight is all about.

Jed Harris Comments

Commenting on the suit, Director Jed Harris states:

"I was present in Paris when Sartre granted Jean Dalrymple and Gabriel Pascal (her partner), owners of the American and English rights, complete carte blanche for the American adaptation. He qualified this in the following way: that he did not want the ideology tampered with and that he was chiefly concerned that the play should be a financial success in America.

"If Sartre is now willing to testify that 'Red Gloves,' which, by the way, is Sartre's original title, although he has imputed this title to the invention of Miss Dalrymple, is a 'vulgar, common melodrama with anti-Communist bias', then it is so because that is the way he wrote it. And he is using the very words applied to the play by the Communist press in Paris, the review in L'Humanite actually being headed 'La Piece Sale' ('The Dirty Play')."

Whatever way you slice it, it looks as though "Red Gloves" is going to be the season's most discussed play.

Eric Johnston on Program

Motion Picture Chief Slated For Next Book-Author Lunch

Eric Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America and author of the recently published book on American foreign policy, "We're All in It," will be one of the four speakers at the next Washington Post Book and Author luncheon, to be held at the Statler on Thursday, December 9, at 1 p. m.

Johnston

Mr. Johnston is best known for his work with the film industry and as head of the United States Chamber of Commerce, but he is now showing himself a keen observer of foreign affairs.

"We're All in It" is, in a sense, a letter home to Main st. from a Main st. man, and the title aptly summarizes the general thesis. Mr. Johnston strongly believes that the job of shaping American foreign policy is "too big to leave to a few politicians" because all of us are in it—the lives of everyone of us will be affected by what we do or don't do as a great world power in the years immediately ahead. It should, he writes in his book, be shaped in strict accord with enlightened American self-interest.

"An American foreign policy," he states, "without self-interest would be like a business without profits. It would go bust."

A native Washingtonian, Eric Johnston writes with authority. He has traveled widely, first, as a Marine officer on diplomatic assignment in the Far East after World War I, then as president of the United States Chamber of Commerce during World War II, and most recently as president of the Motion Picture Association. In the latter two capacities he has come to know most of the top men in the world today.

High spots of his book are the account of his lengthy stay in Russia, where he interviewed Stalin, and the dramatic story of the last days of Jan Masaryk.

Other speakers at the Book and Author luncheon will be Betty Smith, author of "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" and "Tomorrow Will Be Better;" Dr. Douglas Freeman, Pulitzer Prize winner and author of "George Washington: A Biography," and Emily Kimbrough, author of "It Gives Me Great Pleasure."

States Warned To Combat U. S. Encroachment

Houston, Tex., Nov. 28 (AP).—Attorney General J. Tom Watson of Florida today said the States must organize to combat Federal encroachment on States' rights.

Watson is expected to make recommendations Monday for such State action before the opening business session of the forty-second annual conference of the National Association of Attorneys General.

In an interview, the association's president said the rights of the various States are being threatened by Federal legislaion pertaining to medicine, schools, taxation and social benefits.

"These problems in themselves are sufficient for the States to organize themselves against encroachment," Watson said.

Highway Underpasses Airport Runway

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

GLIMPSE OF THE FUTURE—Automobile traffic is shown moving through underpass built beneath a runway of New York City's International Airport at Idlewild, while an Air Force Constellation uses the runway. The underpass, part of the main roadway into the airport, is described as a "concrete boat," built to withstand pressure below sea level and to sustain two runway bridges. It is said to be the first underpass of its kind in the world

War Danger Has Lessened, Dulles Says

Paris, Nov 28 (U.P.).—John Foster Dulles, acting chairman of the United States delegation to the United Nations, said tonight the danger of war had been greatly reduced.

He said the U. N. seemed to be "within reach" of a settlement of the Palestine problem and that it might even achieve a solution of the Berlin crisis before the General Assembly adjourns.

Dulles made what is perhaps the most optimistic statement by a high U. N. leader since the annual meeting started here September 21. He made it in a radio interview with Larry LeSueur, Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent.

In a broad review of the situation here, Dulles said also he was sure the U. N. Assembly would be able to adjourn before Christmas without need for a second session early next year at Lake Success, N. Y. The target date for adjournment is December 11.

He disclosed that the United States is opposing the suggestion of some U. N. leaders for the Lake Success meeting.

Dulles said that the U. N. Assembly had made it clear to all world leaders that "any nation . . . launched an attack would find itself at once opposed by most of the world." The Assembly, he said, has "really increased the chances of peace."

The most serious threat to peace, he said, is the "risk of miscalculation" by some ambitious leader. But the willingness of most of the world to oppose aggression, he said, leaves "no further excuse for a hope of a Kaiser or a Hitler that nations can be conquered one by one."

Dulles also reaffirmed the insistence of the Western powers that Russia lift its blockade before any negotiations are held on Berlin or the German problem as a whole.

Slavs Celebrating Independence Day

Belgrade, Nov. 28 (U.P.).—Torchlight parades, folk dancing, and singing in the streets tonight launched the celebration of the fifth anniversary of Yugoslavia's independence day.

Monday is the anniversary of the formation of the "Anti-Fascist Council of National Liberation of Yugoslavia." It was formed by Marshal Tito's partisans at a mountain village in Bosnia at the height of the campaign against Germany.

Pinza Proves His Mastery In Recital at Constitution Hall

By Richard Keith
Post Reporter

The bleak weather of yesterday afternoon failed to take a perceptible toll of the audience which heard the recital by Ezio Pinza, famous bass-baritone of the Metropolitan Opera at Constitution Hall. The auditorium was well filled with enthusiastic admirers.

Although many operatic stars have risen and fallen since Pinza made his debut in 1926, he continues to be one of the few truly great singers of the day. The real test of a superior voice is whether or not it can withstand the strenuous task of continuous operatic use over a long period.

The recital opened with the traditional group of early Italian airs, which Pinza sang with deeply dramatic understanding. His delicately tempered interpretation of Da Gigliano's "Dormi, amore" was the outstanding moment of the group.

An old hand at Mozart roles, Pinza was supremely commanding in his performance of the two arias from "The Marriage of Figaro" which closed the first half of the program. The dramatic gestures, so often embarrassingly awkward when indulged in by less experienced singers, seemed perfectly natural.

In his third group, he ventured away from his native music and sang five songs by French, British and American composers. The French songs, while deeply moving, seemed to be a little too warm-blooded and lacked the characteristic Gallic restraint. It was a pleasure, however, to hear Randall Thompson's "Velvet Shoes" sung in a walking rather than trudging tempo.

A grim song about two maggots and three happy Piedmontese folksongs led up to the powerful aria from Verdi's Simon Boccanegra, "Il lacerato spirito," which closed the program. In this poignant prayer, the best qualities of Verdi and Pinza united.

The accompaniments of Herman Allison hardly ever gave weighty enough support to the singer.

The question of why singers persist in using flowery Victorian accompaniments for classic Italian songs and why we criticize the Italian diction of our native singers while overlooking the bad English diction of Italian singers, was once again raised by yesterday's recital.

Choral Group at Phillips

Paul Callaway led a small choral group in madrigals from the sixteenth and twentieth centuries yesterday afternoon at the Phillips Gallery.

Although occasionally shaky about pitch and entrances, the group managed this difficult style of singing very well.

The interpretations of the Monteverdi pieces were models of restrained expressiveness. Ned Rorem's four madrigals on texts from Sappho are sensitive and well written musically, but suffer from unsuitably long texts. Three delightful chansons by Debussy closed the concert.

Three Plastic Spoons Put With Combat Ration

By The Associated Press

From now on, when a United States soldier has to eat field rations out of a can under combat conditions, he won't have to rely on an unwashed spoon.

The Army, announcing it had perfected a better combat ration, said three plastic spoons will be packaged with each ration. These spoons are intended to be thrown away after being used once.

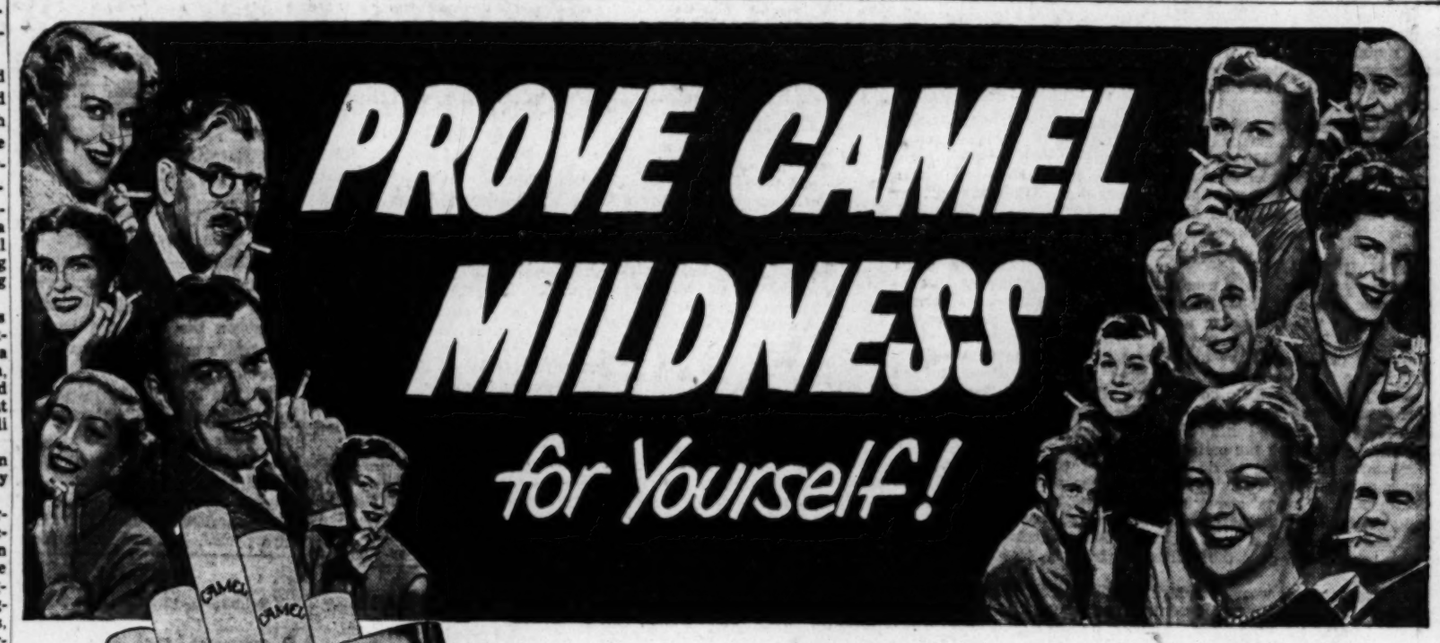
PROVE CAMEL MILDNESS for Yourself!



Prove for yourself what throat specialists reported when 30-day smoking test revealed

NO THROAT IRRITATION due to smoking CAMELS!

How mild can a cigarette be? Make the 30-day Camel mildness test—and then you'll know!

A similar 30-day test was recently made by hundreds of smokers from coast to coast. These men and women smoked Camels exclusively for 30 days—an average of one to two packs a day. Each week, noted throat specialists examined the throats of these smokers—a total of 2470 exacting examinations. And these specialists reported not one single case of throat irritation due to smoking Camels!

Put Camels to the test—in your "T-Zone" (T for Taste and T for Throat). Let YOUR OWN TASTE tell you about the full, rich flavor of Camel's choice tobaccos. Let YOUR OWN THROAT give you the word on Camel's cool mildness.

Money-Back Guarantee!

Try Camels and test them as you smoke them. If, at any time, you are not convinced that Camels are the mildest cigarette you ever smoked, return the package with the unused Camels and we will refund its full purchase price, plus postage. (Signed) R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., Winston-Salem, N. C.

According to a Nationwide survey:
MORE DOCTORS SMOKE CAMELS THAN ANY OTHER CIGARETTE
Doctors smoke for pleasure, too! And when three leading independent research organizations asked 113,597 doctors what cigarette they smoked, the brand named most was Camel!

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

IN PHILADELPHIA Saturday night, a non-fan cab driver evinced a mild curiosity as his passengers talked of the Army-Navy game they had seen. "Who won?" he asked idly.

"Navy won," he was told.

POVICH

"It was 21-21, Navy won," a passenger insisted, if illogically.

It was a claim not so very daft, at that, if ever a tie game was won by any football team, that happened in Municipal Stadium Saturday afternoon. Navy was to take a beating by three touchdowns, or more. At the finish it was Army struggling to preserve the tie status.

The Midshipmen let Admiral Bull Halsey down a bit when they merely achieved a tie after he had announced before the game "the Navy can go where it damn pleases." But he is probably forgiving, and accepts the tie in good grace. The Middies did their very best, which was so very wonderful that a team which had not won a game all season almost licked a team that had not lost a game all season.

NAVY SERVED QUICK notice that it was to be a special sort of performance against Army. They held the Cadets for downs immediately, and Army didn't get out of its own territory in the first quarter. Coach Earl Blaik's famed defensive unit didn't awe the Middies. They went 88 yards to a touchdown the second time they got the ball.

All season, Navy had been able to spring nobody loose for anything like a 59-yard run from scrimmage but on its fifth running play against Army, Pete Williams scampered that far and set up a touchdown. Williams and his blockers shot Army's defense full of holes on the play, and Navy didn't waste its first scoring opportunity.

Coach George Sauer pressed his advantage after it was obvious Army's fastest back, Bobby Stuart, wasn't going to see much action because of injury. Without Stuart's end runs to contend with, Sauer played his tackles tight and relied on his defensive halfbacks to take care of Army's wide plays. They did. Bill Hawkins, Jim Green and Reaves Baysinger discouraged the Army's attack at the flanks.

BAYSINGER HAD THE MOST magnificent day of his three years on the Navy varsity. Navy coaches never know for sure when Baysinger, the in-and-outer is going to have a hot afternoon or a dismal one. He was something to see Saturday, quarterbacking the Middies as if he were working with the three-touchdown favorites.

It was a day when Navy didn't beat itself, as has happened so often in the past three years. Knowing his team's propensity for fumbling, Baysinger took no chances after Williams had carved out a first down on the 2-yard line. He eliminated the risk of too much ball-handling by calling his own signal for a pair of quarterback sneaks that took the ball over.

Baysinger attempted to do the generous thing for young Bill Powers on the Navy touchdown that tied the score at 14-14 in the third quarter. Powers' smart 23-yard run took the ball to Army's 2, and Baysinger on the next play gave him a shot at the touchdown. But after Powers fell a yard short, the Navy quarterback stopped fooling around and gave the ball to his big guy, Hawkins, for the touchdown.

Hawkins, too, was weary of playing on losing Navy teams, especially against Army, it was apparent. That second Navy touchdown he scored wasn't a simple thing. Actually he was stopped cold when he hit into a fierce pileup at left guard, but his legs didn't quit churning and he bounced off the pile to skid over the line on his back.

Out of what looked like Navy's darkest despair the Middies bounced back early in the third quarter. As they had been threatening all day, the Cadets finally did block one of Baysinger's punts and it was Army's ball on Navy's 39. Another Army touchdown would have made it 21-7. And an apparent rout. But the Middies called a halt on their own 20.

For Navy's graduating class of 1949, June week will have an extra lilt to it. They were seemingly fated to leave Annapolis labeled as a class that had seen nothing but defeat in the Army-Navy game. Now it's different. They saw Navy's proudest football afternoon against Army.

Eagles Beat Steelers by 17-0, Clinch Title in East

Philadelphia, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Philadelphia Eagles whipped a stubborn Pittsburgh Steelers team 17 to 0 today to clinch the Eastern division championship of the National Football League for the second straight year.

Tommy Thompson passed for one touchdown and set up another with a long pass while big Cliff Patton booted a 31-yard field goal as the Eagles parlayed their victory with the Washington Redskins' defeat to win the divisional title.

A Shibe Park crowd of 22,001 watched the Eagles soar to their eighth straight victory after losing their opener and tying their second contest.

The Shibe Park gathering sat through a cold, damp afternoon to watch Coach Greasy Neale's powerful Eagles run up a 17-point lead in the first half and then, with star runner Steve Van Buren sitting on the bench with a kneecap injury, battle the Steelers to a standoff in the final two periods.

Drive 56 Yards for Score

After Patton missed an early field-goal attempt from the Pittsburgh 43, the Eagles drove 56 yards on four plays for the first touchdown.

Thompson passed 48 yards to Pete Pihos for a first down on the Steeler 8. Van Buren picked up four yards in two smashes and Bosh Pritchard cracked into the end zone. Cliff Patton converted the first of two extra points to run his conversion string to 41 straight this year and 59 in a row over two seasons.

A 14-yard screen pass, Thompson to Pete Pihos, accounted for the second touchdown eight seconds after the second quarter got under way. Jack Myers, Van Buren and Pritchard ate up hunks of yardage on the 68-yard drive.

Moments later the Eagles started to move again from their 46 but after Thompson passed five yards for a first down on the Steeler 27 the attack stalled and Patton dropped back and booted his seventh field goal of the season from the 31.

Finish Under Lights

That made the score 17 to 0 and ended the point making for the day.

Rain fell through much of the second half and it became so dark that the arc lights were turned on for the final period.

Pittsburgh made its first real scoring threat early in the third period after Pat McHugh fumbled a punt and Cifers picked it up and lateraled to Evans who came back 15 yards to the Eagle 21. Joe Glamp drove to the Eagle 9 but the Steelers were held for downs on the 5.

Another fumbled punt, this time by Pritchard, gave Pittsburgh a life on the Eagle 34. Three passes by Joe Gasparella, former Notre Dame back, went incomplete and the threat died.

Van Buren gained 25 yards on seven attempts to increase his ground gaining total to 849 yards, 159 short of his single season record and 198 shy of Clark Hinkle's all-time ground gaining mark.

Chicagoans Cash In on 3 Fumbles for Touchdowns

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Chicago, Nov. 28.—In one of the worst exhibitions of football ever staged in the National Football League, the Washington Redskins knocked themselves out of their last chance for the Eastern title here today as they suffered a 48-13 setback by the Chicago Bears.

Before a near-capacity mob of 42,299, expecting a bang-up battle betwen the bitter intersectional rivals, the Redskins literally handed Chicago its ninth victory in 10 games this year and a tie for the Western lead.

Three Redskin fumbles in the first four minutes of play spotted the Bears a 20-point lead and the 42,299 might as well have gone home. It was all over.

The remainder of the playing time was spent in a futility contest, won by the Redskins because they were able to give up more points than the Bears. Washington's big slip in the late stages was the fact it held Chicago scoreless in the third quarter.

Name Passers Ineffective

With a total of four of the country's greatest passers on the two teams, and playing under ideal weather conditions, the game's most ineffective item was its passing. Sammy Baugh completed only 15 of his 31 attempts and Jimmy Youel connected on 3 out of 11.

The Bears' Sid Luckman completed 7 out of 18 aerials, and his understudy, Bobby Layne, clicked on 1 out of 10. Johnny Lujack, the Bears' other passing ace, didn't toss a single pass, but collected six points with conversion after all but one of the Bear's touchdowns.

Howard Hartley fumbled for two of the Bears' three lightning-like touchdowns as the game started, and Bob Nussbaumer fumbled the Bears home the third time.

It was on Washington's first play from scrimmage, after taking the kickoff, that Hartley committed his first bobble. Pat Preston was on the ball at the Redskin 14, and the same burly guard was immediately on the end of a 13-yard fumble play, started by Mullins, giving Chicago a first down on the Redskin 1.

Browns Whip 49ers, 31-28

Victory Gives Cleveland Title

By Hal Wood

San Francisco, Nov. 28 (U.P.)—Automatic Otto Graham, playing on a painfully injured leg and spilled repeatedly by a vicious defense, threw four touchdown passes—three of them in the third period—to give the Cleveland Browns a 31 to 28 victory over San Francisco and their third straight All American Conference Western Division football championship.

A crowd of 61,000 saw him pull Cleveland from the brink of defeat.

The relentless, rock-ribbed Browns quickly snared a 10-point lead in the first period but then wavered and trailed, 14 to 10, at the end of the half.

They were behind as much as 21 to 10 in the third period before Graham — despite frequent dumpings by 'Frisco defensive Center Veri Lillywhite—finally turned on the heat that burned Cleveland's name into the victory book once again.

This win kept the Brown record undefeated and untied through 12 games this season, and gave Coach Paul Brown's crew its twenty-second game without defeat.

The future looked black as the Browns trailed, 21-16, in that vital third period. But someone turned on the switch and Automatic Otto began functioning:

First, a 33-yard touchdown pass to Marion Motley.

Second, a 20-yard touchdown pass to Edgar (Special Delivery) Jones.

Third, a 7-yard touchdown pass to Dub Jones.

And that made the score 31-21. San Francisco scored a touchdown and a conversion in the last period, but it was too late then. Cleveland already was headed east, figuratively speaking, for its date with the Eastern Division champion.

Before that, Cleveland had gained their 10-0 lead in the opening period on two San Francisco fumbles. The first came on the first play from scrimmage when Forty-Niner Jim Carson dropped the ball on his 45 and the Browns

Rams Outrun Green Bay, Win, 24-10

Los Angeles, Nov. 28 (AP).—The Los Angeles Rams outpassed and outran the Green Bay Packers today and sent 23,874 supporters home celebrating a 24-10 National Football League victory in Memorial Coliseum.

Two second-half scores sewed up the game. Jerry Cowhig inspired a 66-yard scoring march with End Kenny Washington adding three nice gains. Washington sliced over untouched from the 7 for the touchdown.

Waterfield angled a perfect field goal from the Green Bay 37 in the final period after the Rams were stopped on the 30.

In the first quarter, the Rams covered 51 yards in two plays to open the scoring as Waterfield passed to Washington for 14 yards and then to End Howard Hickey for the touchdown.

A pass interception in the second quarter set Green Bay up at the Ram 21 and two plays later Canadeo shook off the entire Los Angeles team to score from the 15.

A few moments later Ted Fritsch booted a field goal from the Los Angeles 31 following a poor Los Angeles quick kick.

Hoerner sparked a 55-yard Los Angeles scoring march as they bounced into a 14-10 halftime lead. The bruising fullback bucked over from the 2.

Sauer Speaks At TD Club

George Sauer, the Navy coach with no wins, eight losses, one tie, and a successful football season behind him, will appear before the Touchdown Club tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. to tell the Monday morning quarterbacks all about that 21-21 game with Army.

Contrasted with Sauer's happy review of the interservice quarrel will be a post-mortem on yesterday's Redskin slaughter in Chicago. Schoolboy stars of the past week will also be presented.

Orange Bowl Expected to Select Texas

Miami, Fla., Nov. 28 (AP).—The Orange Bowl committee said today it was not announcing the University of Georgia's opponent for the fifteenth annual New Year's Day classic until Monday afternoon.

Will M. Preston, head of the Orange Bowl committee said:

"There will be no announcement as to Georgia's opponent in the Orange Bowl classic until Monday aftrnoon.

'Several teams are under consideration. However, Georgia will not be matched with another Southeastern Conference team."

From Austin, Tex., University of Texas Athletic Director Dana X. Bible said that the University of Texas Longhorns are being considered to oppose Georgia.

Bible said final decision will be made by the Orange Bowl committee tomorrow afternoon at Miami, Fla.

The University of Texas official said that was all the information he had in regard to the Longhorns' prospects for the postseason game.

Georgia, beaten only by North Carolina, was selected by the committeee last night.

Texas, which defeated Alabama 27-7 in the Sugar Bowl last year, finished its season Thursday with a 14-14 tie with Texas A. & M. The Longhorns wound up the campaign with six victories, three losses and one tie.

Georgia won eight straight games after losing to North Carolina. The Bulldogs finished with a 9-1 record.

Athletic officials of the University of Texas could not be reached for comment but unofficial sources said they considered an invitation to play in the Orange Bowl "in the bag."

These sources said the question already had been submitted to the Texas players.

Coach Sauer Lionized

Tars Chant 'We Beat Army,' Hit 'Victory' Bell With Bats

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 28 (AP).—The scoreboard might have showed a tie but 2000 Navy midshipmen chanted "We beat Army" today and broke tradition by ringing a "victory" bell brought back from Japan by Commodore Perry.

Climaxing a rousing welcoming home for the Navy football squad which deadlocked Army, 21-21, in Philadelphia Saturday, the Middies grabbed the pagoda-like bell which hadn't been rung since VJ-Day.

Third Classman Owen Ware of Petaluma, Calif., led a race for the bell and 100 mates helped him carry it to the steps of Bancroft Hall.

There, a grinning Coach George Sauer and the football players pounded it lustily with bowling pins and baseball bats. The bell is supposed to be rung only after victories over Army, last achieved in 1943. But Coach Sauer, at least, didn't care.

"This is all new to me," said the young coach who came to Navy this year from Kansas and salvaged a disastrous season by tying a three-touchdown favorite Army eleven after eight straight losses.

The demonstration lasted for half an hour in a driving rain after the squad arrived in four buses behind screeching fire engines and an ambulance.

The Middies hoisted Coach Sauer to their shoulders and paraded him around Tecumseh, the Indian figurehead in front of Bancroft Hall.

"It's the first time I've ever experienced as lean a year as this and to have the brigade stand by through thick and thin is pretty wonderful," the highly pleased coach said.

"Navy did everything but run Army off the field," he continued, recalling Admiral William Halsey's famed wartime remark: "The Navy goes where it damn pleases."

The ambulance which led the returning squad bore a banner "Navy Won—Truman."

And that's exactly how the Middies viewed the game by turning out for today's "victory celebration." Loudest among their chants was one for the "Hawk"—Fullback Bill Hawkins who scored two of the Navy's three touchdowns.

Sauer and his team took out their exuberance on the bell, chips flying from the implements they used to bang it. The bell was given the Academy in 1858 by the widow of Commodore Matthew C. Perry who received it from the regent of the Ryuku Islands.

The lowly plebes were hoping to profit by the moral victory. They waited for a "carry on" from the first classmen which meant they wouldn't have to brace up for upper classmen and march to mess in formation, a traditional relaxation after Navy triumphs.

Army Receives Victors' Welcome At West Point

West Point, N. Y., Nov. 28 (AP).—Army's football team, held to a surprising 21-21 tie by Navy yesterday, returned home from Philadelphia tonight and received a conquerors' welcome.

Cheered by a crowd of 2000, the Cadets were hauled from the station to the Academy in the "victory wagon" just as if they'd swept through the Middies to a perfect season as expected.

A spokesman said the squad had completely recovered from the attack of dysentery that struck the corps of Cadets, including many team members, before the big service game.

"Guess what we had to eat on the train?" the spokesman said. "Turkey."

It was warmed-over Thanksgiving turkey that was believed to have been responsible for the dysentery trouble. Nineteen members of the football team were affected but Coach (Red) Blaik insisted "this in no way played a part in the outcome of the game or in the play of the Army team."

Gator, Jacksonville—Clemson vs. Missouri.

Delta, Memphis — Oklahoma A. & M. vs. W. & M.

Dixie, Birmingham — Wake Forest vs. Baylor.

Sun, El Paso—West Virginia vs. Texas Mines.

Lakers Lace Philly, 88-67

Minneapolis, Nov. 28 (AP).—With Guard Herman Schaefer setting the pace, the Minneapolis Lakers racked up their sixth straight Basketball Association of America victory tonight, defeating Philadelphia, 88-67.

The season's biggest Minneapolis crowd—6621—saw Schaefer bucket 25 points as the Lakers took the lead in the opening minutes of the game.

Joe Fulks, high scorer of Philadelphia, tallied 15 points to pace the losers whose defeat was their fourth in a row and ninth in 13 games.

The Lakers attack was bolstered by addition of Arnold Ferrin, former Utah ace whom Minneapolis picked up after the college all-star game at Chicago.

Fraternization Out For Hockey Players

Toronto, Nov. 28 (AP).—Players in the National Hockey League are warned against fraternization with players of opposing teams on and off the ice in a letter signed by Clarence Campbell, president.

A copy of Campbell's letter is posted on the players' bulletin board in the dressing room of the Toronto Maple Leafs. The letter says that fraternization may give a wrong impression to fans.

Pitt Names Director Today

Pittsburgh, Nov. 28 (AP).—The University of Pittsburgh hopes to pick a man tomorrow who will lead it out of the Athletic wilderness and back to gridiron glory.

Navy Capt. Thomas Hamilton—if he can be released from his present post as Athletic Director at the United States Naval Academy—is considered the man with the best chance for the Pitt job. The post has been vacant since the resignation last summer of Jimmy Hagan.

The picking will be done by the Pitt Athletic Committee and the under-graduate deans. Their choice will have to be confirmed by the board of trustees.

The fact that the undergraduate deans will participate in the selection indicates to some observers that the new athletic director may have a dual title—that of athletic director and director of physical education. It would be a new job in that form and would carry a larger salary than was given Hagan.

Hamilton, a former football coach at the Naval Academy, has had no comment on his availability other than he was "pleased to be considered."

Chancellor Rufus H. Fitzgerald, in announcing tomorrow's meeting, said Hamilton "and others would be considered.

The "others" are said to include Jack (Spike) Harding of Miami (Fla.) U.; Wes Fesler of Ohio State; and Lloyd Jordon of Amherst.

Gonzaga Game Off Until Tuesday

The Gonzaga St. John's Catholic High School game, postponed yesterday because of the rain, will be played Tuesday night at Griffith Stadium at 8:30.

The CYO Junior championship game between Blessed Sacrament and St. Anthony's, scheduled to precede the high school game yesterday, was also postponed and will be rescheduled at a later date.

Merlyn Condit Quits as Coach At West Virginia

Morgantown, W. Va., Nov. 28 (AP).—The president's office announced tonight that Merlyn Condit has resigned as football backfield coach at West Virginia University, effective Tuesday.

Condit, former Charleston High School all-State performer and later a Carnegie Tech star and National Professional League player, said he was not at liberty to disclose his immediate plans.

He added he had been waiting for the end of the regular season to sever his connection with the university, but that he cannot stay with the coaching staff until the Sun Bowl game at El Paso, Tex., January 1. Head Coach Dudley DeGroot expressed his regret at losing Condit.

DeGroot and Condit have been associated for a number of years. The Charleston star played for DeGroot on the Washington Redskins, and later followed DeGroot to serve as assistant coach for the Los Angeles Dons.

15 Perfect Teams Remain

New York, Nov. 29 (U.P.).—Army 21, Navy 21 . . . and that left 15 unbeaten, untied teams today as the football season neared its end.

The surprising tie in the service classic at Philadelphia sheared the number of major perfect-record elevens to a mere four—Notre Dame, Michigan, California and Clemson.

Of them, Michigan and California have completed their regular seasons. Notre Dame walloped Washington, 46 to 0, Saturday and meets Southern California this week. Clemson beat Auburn, 7 to 6, in a muddy mess and faces The Citadel Saturday.

Ten victories—California, Southern U., Rice, Texas, Texas A. & M., Army, Navy, Notre Dame, Michigan, Clemson.

Nine victories—Michigan State, Missouri Valley, Muhlenberg, Bloomsburg Teachers, Clemson.

Eight victories—Denison, Alma, West Liberty State, Wesleyan, Occidental.

Baltimore Wins, Keeps Chance to Tie Bills for Eastern Title

Colts Sock Brooklyn By 38 to 20

By Joe Reichler

Brooklyn, Nov. 28 (AP).—Baltimore retained a fighting chance to deadlock Buffalo for the Eastern divisional championship of the All-America Football Conference today, coming from behind to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 38-20, before a slim gathering of 7625 paid admissions.

STATISTICS

The victory was the Colts' sixth against seven defeats. They trail Buffalo by one game. The Bills eliminated the New York Yankees and need only a tie or a victory over Baltimore in the season's finale next Sunday to insure the title. A Colt triumph would leave the two teams deadlocked at seven victories and seven defeats.

Tittle Paces Colts

The Colts were sparked to victory by the forward passing of Y. A. Tittle and the spectacular running of Bill Hillenbrand. Trailing 20-17 late in the third quarter, the Colts moved in front with a minute remaining in the period, and sewed up the contest with two insurance touchdowns in the final stanza.

Baltimore banged across its winning tally on a three-yard buck by Bus Mertes, a hard-plunging fullback from Iowa University—his second score of the game. To set up the tally, Hillenbrand got off a 36-yard jaunt from his own 29 to Brooklyn's 35. Tittle then tossed two 17-yarders to Windoll Williams and Jake Leicht to put the ball on the three.

Hillenbrand Scores

Tittle also passed to Baltimore's second and fifth touchdowns. He teamed up with Lamar Davis for a 49-yard scoring pass play in the first period, and flung a 28-yard payoff aerial to Leicht in the final frame. Hillenbrand accounted for the last Baltimore touchdown on a 9-yard spring around his own right end.

In all, Tittle, the former Louisiana State University star, attempted 26 passes and completed 20 for 249 yards. Hillenbrand gained 112 on 12 rushing attempts.

The Dodgers, badly handicapped by the absence of their passing ace, Bob Chappuis, relied mainly on the arm of Monk Gafford, and the plunging of Mickey Colmer. Gafford, who completed 14 of 26 pass attempts, hurled all three Brooklyn touchdowns. He connected with a 36-yarder to Ray Ramsey and a 60-yarder to Burry Burrus in the first period. He put the Dodgers into a temporary lead with a 41-yard aerial to Bob Hoerneschemeyer.

Chewning Wins Scoring Honors

Richmond, Va., Nov. 28 (AP).—Hampden-Sydney's Lynn Chewning today was "in" as the State's best individual point-maker for the 1948 football campaign.

Chewning scored 70 points, including 13 touchdowns. Tied behind him were Brian Bell, Washington and Lee halfback, and Bill Miller, Emory and Henry halfback, each with 48.

Howard Named Conference Coach of Year

FRANK HOWARD

Clemson Mentor Has 9-0 Season

Frank Howard, whose Clemson College team will sew up the Southern Conference football championship next Saturday, has been elected the conference's coach of the year.

His selection was announced yesterday by the Southern Conference Sports Writers' Association. Howard's Clemson footballers are unbeaten and untied in nine games this year and figure to walk over winless The Citadel Saturday and wrap up the conference title.

The Clemson team which Howard, former guard at Alabama under Wallace Wade, guided to its spotless record, is pretty much the same club which had only a fair season in 1947.

The difference was the play of Halfback Bobby Gage, one of the conference's leading scorers. Gage has turned in some of the best performances in Dixieland this season and was selected on the All-Southern team himself.

Globetrotters Dazzle Fans

The 1200 fans who turned out to see the basketball double-header last night at Uline's Arena were given a real treat by the tricky Harlem Globetrotters as they breezed by the Indiana Clark Twins, 65 to 43.

They also saw an exciting preliminary in which the Kansas City Stars beat out the Philadelphia Sphas, 55-53, in the last 20 seconds.

The renowned Reece (Goose) Tatum, masterful ball handler and trick-shot artist, drew the plaudits of the crowd repeatedly with his wizardry, as did Nat Sweetwaters, 6-foot 7-inch showman. Marcus Haines' fancy dribbling also left the Twins flabbergasted.

Boid Buie, one-armed performer, played a vital role with his 12-point total and two free throws which tied the score in the preliminary for the Stars, and Vertis Ziegler's set shot won the contest. Sid Weiner of the Sphas was the game's top scorer with 17 points.

Yale Wins Regatta

Chicago, Nov. 28 (AP).—Yale nosed out Michigan by eight points today, 336-328, to win the second annual collegiate fall invitational dingy regatta at Belmont Harbor.

Yankees Beaten, 35-14, By Buffalo

By Harold Claussen

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—A point-happy band of Buffalo Bills clinched at least a tie for the Eastern division championship in the All-America Football Conference today by drubbing New York's Yankees, 35 to 14, before 18,376.

STATISTICS

NEW YORK		BUFFALO
9	First downs	18
70	Yards gained rushed (net)	196
20	Forward passes attempted	28
11	Forward passes completed	13
141	Yards by forward passes	205
1	Forward passes intercepted by	2
22	Yards gained runback int. passes	14
413	Punting average (from scrimmage)	408
208	Total yards all kicks returned	134
0	Opponent fumbles recovered	1
53	Yards lost by penalties	55

The Bills now have won seven games and lost six to top the Eastern sector. Baltimore, in second place, has won six and lost seven. The two teams close the season at Baltimore next Sunday with a Buffalo victory sending the team into the league playoff against the Western titleholder.

Bills Start Early

Buffalo needed a victory today and started out from the very beginning to get it.

The Bills punched out a first period touchdown, then got a pair in each of the following quarters to snuff out what small chance the Yankees had of repeating for a third straight year as Eastern champions.

Chet Mutryn and Rex Bumgardner combined their running to push the passing of George Ratterman into a secondary role for one of the few times this season.

Mutryn streaked 88 yards for one of the Buffalo touchdowns after catching one of Pete Layden's punts in the third period. Ratterman scored twice on short bucks, getting the first after Mutryn had set it up with a 33-yard sprint. Bumgardner romped 27 yards to start the other drive that Ratterman finished with a 4-yard sneak.

Pass Connects

Only the final Buffalo touchdown came by the Bill's usual passing attack, Ratterman hitting Anton Baldwin for a 12-yard gain that ended behind the goal. Lou Tomassetti registered the Bills' other tally on a 2-yard push early in the second half.

New York's two touchdowns made it possible for Harvey Johnson to kick the two extra points and run his string of consecutive, successful conversions to 73. That beats the previous professional mark of 72 set by Jack Manders of the Chicago Bears back in the early 1930s.

Saddler Fights Brady Tonight

Boston, Nov. 28 (AP).—Boston-born Sandy Saddler, the new world featherweight boxing titlist, will engage hard-punching Dennis Patrick Brady of Hartford, Conn., in the 10-round feature bout tomorrow night at the Boston Garden.

It will be Saddler's second start since he lifted the crown from Willie Pep, another Hartford battler, a month ago. Saddler's title will not be at stake.

Taft A. C. Wins

Jerry Spindler ran 10 yards in the third period to score the game's only touchdown and bring Taft A. C. a 7-0 victory over the Langdon Lions at Taft Field. For the 140-pound Lions it was the second defeat in three years of independent competition.

Conerly Paces Triumph

Giants Spot Boston 2 Early Scores, Rally to Win, 28-14

New York, Nov. 28 (AP).—After spotting the Boston Yankees two touchdowns in the opening period, the New York Giants cashed in on the accurate passing of Charley Conerly today to post a 28-14 triumph in a National Football League game before 19,636 at the Polo Grounds.

Conerly connected on two touchdown passes and scored the other two Giant counters himself after setting up both of them with long forwards.

It was the second straight victory for the Giants—their longest winning streak of the season—and their fourth in 10 starts. Boston's ninth loss in 11 appearances rushed the Yanks deeper into the Eastern division cellar.

Big Giant Second Period

When Ralph Heywood scooped up a Giant fumble and scampered 56 yards for the first Boston touchdown, the skimpy crowd felt an upset was in the making.

The fans were more sure of it when the Yanks marched 60 yards for their second marker, scored on a 9-yard pass from Gene Malinowski to Bill Paschal.

But the Giants pulled themselves together and put the game away in the second period when they tallied three times.

A 61-yard march, started late in the first quarter, wound up in the second with Conerly hitting Ray Poole with a 5-yard pass in the end zone.

Then Conerly smashed to a touchdown from a yard out. Carried to the Boston 14 by a 48-yard pass from Conerly to Poole, the Giants couldn't break a receiver into the clear so the Giant freshman scurried over the goal line untouched.

The second half, played entirely under lights, was a listless affair with the Giants experimenting with the T-formation and Boston making only two threats, both of which fizzled.

Early in the third quarter, the Yanks reached the Giant 8, but Frank Reagan intercepted one of Malinowski's passes on the goal and ran it out to the Giant 45. Cornerly's short passes and some nice running by Gene Roberts took the Giants to the Boston 23, from where Conerly pitched to Bill Swiacki for the final score.

A total of 22 penalties were called during the game, tying a league record set in a game between Brooklyn and Green Bay in 1944.

Embassy Set Attends Debut Of Exciting 6-Day Bike Races

By Sy Fishbein
Post Reporter

WASHINGTON FOUND itself a new baby last night at the National Guard Armory and liked it.

The few hundred hardy souls who ventured out to the Armory at 19th and East Capitol sts. in the biting rain were richly rewarded by the opening of the international six-day bike races.

Most of the crowd was slightly confused, wondering what it was in for, was soon smitten by the spectacle of 24 hunched cyclists, the colors of eight nations emblazoned on their jerseys, tearing madly about an eight-laps-to-the-mile oval shaped like a flop ear.

Starting time was 9 p. m. At a few minutes before 9, something happened that required no connoisseur to recognize it as one of the big thrills in the game. Taking their warmup laps, Gustav Kilian and Franco Georgetti, the last remnants of the old six-day school, smashed into each other on the 70-degree bank of the south turn.

THE OLD TIMERS shook the loose lumber out of their slats and took up the chase.

Mayhem looked familiar to the unitiated audience and it settled back. D. C. National Guard Comdr. Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox started them off and it wasn't long before a good many more splinters found their way into the hides of the racers.

Roger Le Nizerhy blew a tire and made it safely to his attendant. Then young Roy Barnes, the lithe Jamaica Negro, began to take his lumps and by midnight had accumulated adhesive collars around both knee caps, and one elbow as well as a stinging strawberry high up on his left thigh.

Barnes, however, was holding his own with his partner Roger Godeau of France, the pair having stolen five laps by midnight.

THE EMBASSY SET started ambling in for the 10 o'clock sprint, the first of the race. First to arrive was Hugues Le Gallais, minister of Luxembourg.

He was followed soon after by Henri Bonnet, the Ambassador of France; Hume Wrong, the Ambassador of Canada; Otto Reuchlin, the minister of Holland, and Hans Bertelsen, counsellor to the Danish Embassy.

The sprints occurring five times each hour and lasting for 16 laps, require only one rider of a team. The other retires to his radio-crate-sized bunk on the infield rim to rest up for his turn.

The French entry of Jean Goujon and Roger Le Nizerhy were the most ambitious in the first two hours of sprinting, piling up 35 points to take the lead there, while Kilian and lemon-topped Severino Rigoni made hay in between, stealing seven laps on the field. Their sevten was more than anybody else filched during the early hours.

When they weren't sprinting or trying to lap the field, the riders were relaxing, completely at ease in the saddle. Roy Barnes munched a sandwich, Arne Pedersen of Denmark, badgered the referee for his position during several easy laps while his partner Carl Koblauch carried the mail. Rene Paquin jogged around without effort with one resting on his handlebars. What the heck! They were going to be around for five and a half more days.

Standings late last night:

Name	Miles	Laps	Pts.
Kilian-Rigoni	47	7	18
Goujon-Le Nizerhy	47	6	35

recovered. From there Graham threw the first of his touchdown passes, this one to Dante Lavelli.

Later in the period another San Francisco fumble gave Cleveland the ball on the Forty-Niner 17. The attack was stalled there, but Lou Groza booted a field goal.

San Francisco came back smarting after those bobbles—they had been beaten by Cleveland earlier this year on two fumbles—and scored two touchdowns in the second period.

The first came on a 65-yard drive, with Joe Perry legging over from the five. The second was a 62-yard march climaxed by Frankie Albert's pass to Alyn Beals.

That made the score 14-10 at the half. In the third period the Forty-Niners tallied when desperate Cleveland, trying for a first down, lost the ball on its own 29. Albert passed to Beals again for a second touchdown. In the fourth it was an Albert-to-Perry pass which gave San Francisco a touchdown.

But by then it was too late. Automatic Otto had clicked.

Bears Snow Redskins Under, Win, 48 to 13

shot at left guard for the Bears' first touchdown. Fred Evans, rookie back from Notre Dame, handled the other two very nicely.

Nussbaumer lost the ball on Washington's third offensive effort and Evans simply picked it up and trotted 10 yards for a score. Fifty-three seconds later, on the Skins' fourth play from scrimmage, Evans had to go all of 16 yards for another quickie touchdown after picking up Hartley's next fumble.

It was only 20-0 at the quarter because Johnny Lujack's placement on the third touchdown was wide, but the Bears corrected that oversight quickly. Two Redskin scoring threats, reaching first the 5 and then the 6, had been stopped before the Bears launched their first legitimate scoring drive.

For 96 yards the Bears marched with Luckman doing the passing. The payoff was when Columbia Sid's 0-yarder to Kavanaugh as Hal Crisler looked on helplessly. It was 27-0, with less than a minute of the second period gone, and it was 34-0 before Washington got a point.

Mullins' 51-yard runback of a Pollion punt set up No. 7 for the Bears with Luckman pitching again. Keane got away from Crisler that time and took the pass over without having a hand on him.

Baugh had his best streak of the day following the kickoff, leading his hopelessly beaten but still hopeful mates 68 yards into the Bear end zone on a series of 12 plays. Baugh's tosses to Doug Turley and Bagarus picked up two first downs, and Dick Todd added another on a wide handoff around right end.

Sammy finally clicked from behind the 14 after two of his shots had gone wide. Bagarus was free as the air between the goal posts, marking up the first touchdown of his comeback with about three dainty steps across the last white line.

Bobby Layne did the passing, and officials made most of the gains for the Bears as they made it 41-7 just before intermission. Two straight Redskin roughing penalties put the Bears 15 yards away from a touchdown, and Kindt covered that yardage with a beautiful run featured by a fancy dance step as he went around Hartley at the 5.

A drill team that furnished half-time entertainment caused more excitement than either of the grid teams in the third quarter. The Bears fizzled on the Redskin 13 and the Redskins fizzled on the Bear 27 and 24.

Pass interceptions, fumbles, and all sorts of penalties were a dime a gross throughout the half. Washington got the next points, however, shortly after Mullins fumbled and Jim Peebles recovered at the Bear 25.

Youel was in charge of the 'Skins as they moved to the Bear one, and the same veteran sneaked over from the quarterback slot with five minutes of the final period elapsed.

The Bears didn't particularly need to get that touchdown back, but they did just to keep in practice. They romped 72 yards through gaping holes opened for them by the 'Skins. When only two yards were left they sent George Gulyanics at the center twice and he finally squeezed over.

It was a nice gesture because it was "George Gulyanics Day" at Wrigley Field. At that point, however, the part of the crowd that hadn't departed was too bored to care.

Lawless Miss, Miss Prime Clash in Charles Town Inaugural

In Martinsburg

200 Attend Rites for Hack Wilson

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 28. More than 200 persons stood in a chill rain as the body of Hack Wilson, former home run king of the National League, was laid to rest here today.

Earlier more than 1000, including many who remembered Wilson's days on the Martinsburg club of the Class D Blue Ridge League, filed through the funeral chapel to view the body. The Rev. Frederic F. Bush, jr., rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, pronounced the final rites under a gloomy sky, in an autumn rain interspersed with flurries of snow.

Among the pallbearers was George (Reggie) Rawlings, who played with Wilson in 1921 and 1922 on the Martinsburg club. There was also Charles (Lefty) Willis of nearby Leetown, W. Va., who joined the Martinsburg team in 1923, the year after Wilson left, but who remembered him. Willis pitched for the Philadelphia Athletics in the late 1920's.

Dr. H. G. Tonkin, who played for the Washington Senators four decades ago, and who was Mayor of Martinsburg when Wilson played here, stood among the honorary pallbearers.

The funeral party also included Mrs. Hazel Wilson of Martinsburg, the ballplayer's widow; members of the local Elks Lodge No. 778, and three unidentified men who came from Wilson's childhood home of Eddystone, near Elwood City, Pa.

Totalizator Will Be Used For Meeting

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

America's "Biggest Little Track"—homey Charles Town with the scenic Blue Ridge Mountains in the background—opens today for its 18-program meeting, annual last stand of thoroughbred racing in the East.

Charles Town has come a long way since it opened in 1933 with racing in the rough. Under the guidance of President Albert J. Boyle, Secretary Leeds K. Riely and the others, the sporty, 6-furlong oval has earned a warm spot in the hearts of racegoers.

While no effort has been made to use their names for publicity purposes, a roll call in the Charles Town clubhouse on a racing day would denote the presence of many of the Nation's top figures—you'd be surprised at their identity.

With the opening of today's session, Charles Town becomes completely modernized. For the first time, the track sports a totalizator. While officials have argued that the manual form of wagering has speeded betting services, they have bowed to the demand for the "tote."

Betting Ring Revamped

In addition to the machines, the entire betting ring has been revamped. Among other improvements is a new surface on the racing strip, with safety to horses and riders the objective.

As usual, particularly at late fall meetings, Charles Town has drawn a good grade of horses, many winners during the year on the big-time ovals. Post time for the first race is 1 p. m.

The full fields assured for the opening day program attest to the number of horses available. Although only eight are allowed to start, the "also eligible" groups, ready to step in through scratches, are up to the limit.

The Inaugural Purse, as usual, heads today's card. The test is one of the two $1200 events scheduled and is at six and a half furlongs for 3-year-olds and up.

The field includes horses that have been racing in the bigtime. Lawless Miss is the likely favorite with her chief opposition expected to come from Virginia Beach, Miss Prime (most consistent winner at the summer meeting), Belstan and one of the Bedwell Stable pair of Fantom Venture and Last Endeavor.

Top Weight 123 Pounds

Racing Secretary Fred Burton has assigned top weight of 123 pounds to both Lawless Miss and Miss Prime. The poundage scales down to 106 for Top Foot, Fantom Venture and Belle Moose.

The secondary feature is equally promising. Ariel Gift, Wary Flight, Masterdom, Stickler, Good Service and others effective over a distance have been lined up for the mile and a sixteenth battle listed as the seventh race.

The meeting will be the first with Andrew R. (Snooks) Winters, state senator of Huntington, W. Va. as the chief steward. Other stewards are Capt. Ewart Johnston, White Post, Va. and John P. Turner, sr. of Baltimore.

Others in top jobs are: Racing Secretary and Handicapper; Fred Burton of Covington, Ky.; Assistant Racing Secretary Greg Johnson of Baltimore, Md. Placing judges: E. A. Stone of Charles Town, W. Va.; A. A. Baldwin and Dulany Randolph of Virginia. Patrol judges: John Pons of Jacksonville, Fla., Roy C. Gordon and Daniel McTaggert of Baltimore, Md. Entry clerk: Greg Johnson. Starter: Harold Holland of New Orleans, La.

Director of wagering: E. H. Tuckwiller of Charleston, W. Va. Clerk of Scales: Gil Haus of Baltimore, Md. Track announcer: Ray Haight of Washington, D. C. Track veternerian: W. E. Trussell. Track physician: Dr. G. P. Morison. Track superintendent: John Briscoe. Custodian of jockey's room: Eddie Morgan of New York City, N. Y. Timer identifier and paddock judge: Lally Collyer of Covington, Ky.

Attendance, Betting Off in Maryland

Baltimore, Nov. 28 (AP).—Fewer people went to Maryland's race tracks in 1948 and those who attended cut down on their betting.

The decline during the 150 days of racing which ended at Bowie Saturday was an 8 per cent in attendance and 11 per cent in the betting.

Attendance at the nine Maryland tracks was 1,462,599 compared to 1,594,056 last year. The total betting dropped from $107,340,804 to $95,235,660.

The biggest sufferers were three of the State's 4-mile tracks, Havre de Grace, Pimlico and Laurel. Wagering at Havre de Grace was off 31 per cent, 22 per cent at Pimlico and 13 per cent at Laurel.

Three of the five half mile ovals experienced betting increases. Cumberland, Hagerstown and Timonium did better in 1948 than last year while Marlboro and Bel Air did not.

The State gets 4 per cent out of the mutuel handle and the track 6 per cent.

Here are the comparisons by tracks:

Havre De Grace: 1948 betting, $15,634,489; 1947 betting, $22,283,831; 1948 attendance, 214,468; 1947 attendance, 267,117.

Pimlico: 1948 betting, $23,841,543; 1947 betting, $27,444,150; 1948 attendance, 361,023; 1947 attendance, 466,786.

Laurel: 1948 betting, $30,878,833; 1947 betting, $33,639,019; 1948 attendance, 276,090; 1947 attendance, 338,009.

Bowie: 1948 betting, $21,398,680; 1947 betting, $21,801,620; 1948 attendance, 283,614; 1947 attendance, 274,567.

Cumberland: 1948 betting, $2,645,472; 1947 betting, $2,640,080; 1948 attendance, 70,000; 1947 attendance, 60,000.

Hagerstown: 1948 betting, $2,626,191; 1947 betting, $2,543,416; 1948 attendance, 80,000; 1947 attendance, 40,000.

Timonium: 1948 betting, $3,149,900; 1947 betting, $3,141,903; 1948 attendance, 75,486; 1947 attendance, 74,601.

Cotton Bowl Rejected N. C., Officials Contend

Dallas, Nov. 28 (AP).—Dan D. Rogers, chairman of the board of the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association, said last night that the Cotton Bowl withdrew its negotiations with North Carolina and that it wasn't the other way around.

North Carolina was the first choice of Southern Methodist University to play it in the Cotton Bowl.

Rogers declared that the Cotton Bowl withdrew and explained that the reason was its refusal to be "placed in the middle" by North Carolina, which wanted to delay the decision until after its game today with Virginia.

The Cotton Bowl today invited Oregon to play here and Oregon accepted.

Catholic Opens Here Tonight With Towson

Coach Abe Rosenfield will send a veteran team except at one position against Towson Teachers tonight, when Catholic University's courtmen make their 1948-49 debut at Brookland. A preliminary game at 7:15 will open the doubleheader, with the varsity tilt scheduled for 8:30.

Jim Lusty, 6-foot-1 southpaw, will be the only rookie in the Cardinal line-up, but Rosenfield believes he has a potential star in the youngster. He'll be paired with Fred Connor at forward. Veterans George Laubacher at center, Capt. Gene Szklarz and Jack Walsh at guard will complete the Cardinals' first five.

Connor, Szklarz and Laubacher rung up 503 points last year—more than half C. U.'s total of 932, and they are expected to spark the offense tonight. The Cardinals will exhibit their new, set-play offense in this game, and will have to make it click for Towson has a wealth of tall men and figures to be a high-scoring outfit. The Teachers made their Mason-Dixon Conference debut against American U. last week, but this will be C. U.'s first league test.

Catholic U. defeated Towson twice last season, but there was a mere margin of five points between the two for both games.

Two 8-Rounders At Turner's Tonight

A quartet of slugging middleweights and welterweights are featured in two eight-round bouts in tonight's weekly boxing show at Turner's Arena.

From Asheville, N. C. comes Jumpin' Joe Green to fight Washington's own Artie Bethea for the third time. The 160-pounders have been unable to prove anything in their two previous fights, each having won one by a slender margin.

Locally, Bethea has shone in victories over tough Al Wright, Norval Gaddis, George Williams, Flattop Cummings, and Jim Robinson. Green, despite a dropped decision to Lloyd Gibson, has done some impressive campaigning recently as he breezed victoriously past Detroit's Dave Clark and Emery Jackson.

In the lighter weight, George Bradford Smith, New York, and Walter Rowan, Richmond, wil meet in a bout advertised as a free-swinging affair. Smith likes the long-distance socking that brought him victories over Annunzio Ferrara, Danny Williams and Bobby Lee. Rowan demonstrated his preference for the same kind of fighting when he pummeled Leslie Harris here last week.

Supporting these two will be three five-round bouts involving local talent against out-of-towners.

Middleweight Johnny Holt of Washington faces Oscar Wakefield of Baltimore; Ben Harrison of Washington meets heavyweight Don Wagner from Portsmouth, product, Ray Aldrdge, will oppose Frank Ball.

CSC Not to Object To Lawyers Going Under Merit System

LAWYERS: The Civil Service Commission won't recommend that lawyers be brought in under Civil Service in its annual report to Congress. The Hoover Commission, however, will urge that all legal jobs be under the merit system. Civil Service won't object to it.

INDIAN BUREAU: Will Rogers, jr., the former California Congressman and son of the late famed humorist, has strong support to be commissioner of Interior's Bureau of Indian Affairs. He's part Indian.

CIVIL SERVICE: President Harry B. Mitchell was persuaded to remain in his preesnt post after the President urged him to stay as a personal favor to him. He agreed to continue on for at least six months when the President suggested the matter be reopened.

AGRICULTURE: George Luckey, a California Democratic leader, is reported to have a good chance to be appointed Assistant Secretary of Agriculture. The job definitely won't be reoffered to Elmer Wene of New Jersey, who wouldn't take it after he was given a recess appointment by the President.

STORY: The other day a woman employe of the Internal Revenue Bureau was working on a difficult tax case. Several hundred thousand dollars were at stake in a decision on it. The case had her worried. While she was concerned about a fortune, the phone rang and a voice on the other end said:

"This is sonny's teacher in the second grade at Arlington. You should know that your little boy just swallowed a nickel and we don't know what to do about it."

MILITARY: Defense Secretary Forrestal hopes to persuade the Hoover Commission (he's a member) to recommend higher salaries for some military officers and enlisted men.

The Secretary set up a board made up of private citizens to study the military scale some months ago. The board has made its report—a report which goes into allowances, flight pay, housing, hospitalization, retirement and other military benefits.

A move is on, it's reported, to get both the President and the Hoover group to indorse the main features of the report. Inflation has driven many officers out of the military services.

NLRB: A woman has been given one of the top legal jobs in Government. She's Ida Klaus, who has been appointed solicitor of the National Labor Relations Board. In that job she's the chief legal adviser to the five-man board. Miss Klaus has been a board employe for 11 years, since shortly after her graduation from Columbia. She succeeds Herbert Fuchs who resigned recently. William R. Consedine was promoted to Miss Klaus' job as associate solicitor.

ARMY: How's this for a job? The Army's Quartermaster General has assigned 45 men to spend the winter at Mount Washington, N. H. The men will conduct tests on the durability of clothes and equipment under frigid conditions.

REVENUE: Civil Service is still studying the Hatch "no politics" Act cases against a score of employes in the Boston office of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. It has had the cases for several months.

NOTES: Mrs. Maude Rockwood will retire this week from the Maritime Commission. She has been in Government for 41 years . . . George Davies retires this week from the Bureau of Mines . . . Public Buildings Administration has laid off 58 guards to make room for disabled veterans.

FCC: The Federal Communications Commission received a letter the other day from an optimist who lives in Louisiana. The fellow wanted to take an amateur radio operator's exam. So, he sat down and wrote FCC to supply him with both money and clothes to enable him to go to the city for the test. He didn't want much—only three suits, hats, shirts, shoes, and union suits, but he emphasized that he needed only one handkerchief.

UP: Federal employment here last month jumped up a net of 1400, or about 45 new employes each day. The total number in the executive branch alone here on November 1 was 209,400.

Sizable increases were reported during October by Air Forces, Postoffice, Housing and Home Finance, the Army, Veterans, and General Accounting. In contrast, there was a drop in employment throughout the Nation—a drop of nearly 20,000.

JOB NEWS: An exam will be announced soon by Civil Service for physical science administrator jobs to pay from $5232 to $10,305. A number of jobs are open in and near this city . . . An exam for mediators to fill openings at the National Mediation Board here also is in the works. These jobs pay from $5232 to $6235 a year. The mediators appointed will make headquarters here but spend most of their time traveling to adjust labor disputes involving workers in the railroad and airline industries.

At St. Elizabeths Hospital, exams will be held soon for laborer, domestic attendant, and farmhand jobs that pay from $2020 to $2152 a year to start. And the Naval Gun Factory here has vacancies in boilermaker and machinist jobs that pay $11.84 a day.

Parking Lot Thieves Get Fine Camera, $130 in Cash

Equipment Worth $1500, Owner Says; Christmas Funds Stolen by Burglars

Car plunderers made off with a special camera and equipment valued at $1500 from an auto parked in a downtown lot and removed a box containing $130 in cash from another car over the weekend.

Dr. Alexandro Legarda, of Baltimore, told police his car, parked at a lot at 13th and E sts. nw., was entered Saturday night and a special scenic camera and accessories, including four rolls of movie film, valued at $1500 were stolen.

John K. Kenneth, a route manager for the Washington Daily News, left his car for about five minutes Saturday night at 5th and K sts. se., while on business. When he returned, he told police, thieves had made off with a cardbox containing $130 he had collected from newsboys.

Burglars entered the basement apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Vess at 1210 N st. nw., early yesterday and stole $44 from Vess' pants pocket and another $50 from his wife's purse as they slept. The money was being saved for Christmas gifts, Vess informed police.

GI Is Slashed During Fight; Man Arrested

Youth, 17, Is Held In Wounding Another In Altercation

Pfc. Melvin Hart, 28, of Fort McNair, D. C., was slashed in the abdomen early yesterday during an altercation in a front room at 343 McLean ave. sw. He was admitted to Walter Reed Hospital in undetermined condition.

Police arrested William Smith, 27, 1507 Rosedale st. ne., on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon. Smith is being held at police headquarters for appearance today in Municipal Court.

In an altercation late Saturday, Thomas E. Lee, 19, 1130 Columbia rd. nw., received knife wounds in the chest and back, police reported. Lee was taken to Emergency Hospital, where his condition yesterday was reported fair.

Police have charged a 17-year-old boy with assault with a dangerous weapon.

Fr. Grodavent To Be Honored At Reception

The Rev. Thomas J. Grodavent will be honored by members of St. Stephen's parish at a reception to be given at 8:30 p. m. Friday in the parish school hall, 24th and K sts. nw.

After serving for three years as assistant to the Rev. E. Jerome Winter at St. Stephen's, Father Grodavent has been assigned to serve at Nativity parish, Brightwood.

Father Grodavent will be tendered a purse by members of St. Stephen's parish at the reception and a bouquet of spiritual prayers.

Orchid Society Plans Exhibit Here Friday

The National Capital Orchid Society will sponsor an orchid show Friday in the American Security & Trust Building, 15th and Pennsylvania aves. nw., in connection with the meeting of the trustees of the American Orchid Society.

Sabena, a new hybrid orchid, will make its American debut at the show. The orchid was created by Flanders, a Belgian grower, and named in honor of the Sabena Belgian Airlines. Specimens are being flown to Washington for the show.

Winter Season For Orchestra Opens Dec. 2

With "Arlington Night" as its theme the Arlington Civic Symphony Orchestra will begin its winter season of adult concerts Thursday, December 2, at 8:30 p. m. in the Washington-Lee High School auditorium.

Lanning

Under the direction of F. Van Lier Lanning, the 65-piece orchestra, composed of Arlington housewives and business men, will begin its fourth season of providing concerts for the area. Conductor Lanning pointed out that the orchestra in addition to filling a cultural need in Arlington has operated successfully within its budget to be able to provide several scholarships for aspiring musicians in the community.

The "Arlington Night" concert will include the "Russian and Ludmilla" overture by Glinka, a world premier presentation of "Alhambra" written for the piano by Mrs. Sara Bostwick of Fairlington, Va., and Tchaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite."

A children's concert will be given at the school at 2 and 4 p. m. January 23 and the second of the three adult concerts will be presented February 24 at 8:30 p. m. with Jan Tomasow, concert master of the National Symphony Orchestra, as guest soloist.

THEY ALL LOVE MUSIC—These four young women members of the Arlington Symphony Orchestra travel different walks in life, but all share a love for music. They are (from left) Jane Langwill of 106 N. Youth Is Accused Of Holding Man At Point of Gun

A 15-year-old boy was accused last night of holding a man at gun point in the lobby of the Strand Theater, 401 9th st. nw., and demanding the man's money.

The youth was held at the District Receiving Home on a charge of assault with intent to rob.

Syracuse Alumni Meet Wednesday

The Syracuse University Alumni Club of Washington will meet Wednesday at 12:30 p. m., in the Chantilly Room of the Hamilton Hotel, 14th and K sts. nw., Lawrence S. Casazza, president, announced yesterday.

Roscoe Drummond, chief of the Washington bureau of The Christian Science Monitor, guest speaker, will discuss the national election.

Syracuse alumni who plan to attend have been asked to call Mrs. John F. Shanklin at Woodley 4335, to make reservations.

National Guard Group Elects Maj. Gen. Lowry

Maj. Gen. Sumter Lowry of Tampa, Fla., commander of the Fifty-first Infantry Division, yesterday was elected to the executive council of the National Guard Association, he represents the Third Army Area.

Lowry succeeds Maj. Gen. Henry D. Russell, of Macon, Ga., commander of the Forty-eighth Infantry Division. The election was held at the opening session of the council's annual meeting.

Hotel Engineer Held for Inquest Into Drowning

Mystery Surrounds Detroit Man's Fall From His Cruiser At Buzzard Point

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald last night ordered a 46-year-old hotel engineer to appear today at an inquest into the drowning of a Detroit chemist Saturday night at Buz-Buzzard Point Boat Club.

Held without bail was Charles W. Foley, resident engineer of the Fairfax Hotel, 2100 Massachusetts ave. nw. Victim of the drowning was John Corrington, 38, of Detroit, whose 50-foot cabin cruiser, Antoinette, was moored at the boat club at the foot of First st. sw., for repairs before leaving for Florida.

Detective Lieut. Jeremiah Flaherty, chief of the homicide squad, said Corrington either "fell, jumped or was pushed," from his boat about 11 p. m. Saturday.

Dr. and Mrs. Samuel W. Johnson, who were on their boat near by, said they heard a splash about 11 p. m. and heard calls for help. They scanned the Anacostia River for yards around, saw no one, and then telephoned police. Harbor police and Rescue Squad No. 1 responded and, after about half an hour, recovered Corrington's body about 20 feet off the stern of the Antoinette.

Artificial respiration failed and Corrington was pronounced dead at Casualty Hospital at 1 a. m.

Mrs. Foley, first learning of her husband's detention yesterday afternoon from The Washington Post, said he had been spending much of his leisure time recently making repairs to his boat, berthed at Buzzard Point Boat Club. She said she did not know Corrington.

Flaherty said several persons questioned by detectives said Foley was aboard the Corrington craft during the evening. Foley denied that he was aboard when Corrington went overboard. He said he did not know what had happened to the man, police said.

At Solomons

Boat Blast Burns 3 Men, 2 Severely

Two men were severely burned in an explosion aboard a 35-foot cabin cruiser at 5:30 a. m. yesterday at Bowen's Warf, Solomons Island, Md.

Walter H. Eyles, 51, of Noakesville, Va., president of Nash Arlington Corp., auto dealers, 2015 N. Moore st., Arlington, owner of the boat, was reported in "good condition at Doctors Hospital last night with first, second and third degree burns of the face, hands, leg and chest.

His companion, Alfred Shafer, 48, of Noakesville, was treated at Doctors for burns of the face and hands and released in the care of his private physician. A third man not immediately identified, was less seriously burned and was given first aid with Eyles and Shafer by Dr. Earl Coster at Solomons Island.

The three men were about to start on a fishing trip, police said when Eyles turned the motor switch setting off a terrific blast followed by flames which spread rapidly over the cruiser. G. M. Bowen, who owns the wharf and an inn there, went to the aid of the injured men, then called the Prince Frederick Fire Department and a fire squad from the Naval Mine Testing Base nearby.

Other boatmen played hand extinguishers on the flames as the blaze blistered paint and scorched wood on the adjoining boat of Capt. Alfred Hill, fishing skipper.

Another fisherman, Capt. Leon Langley, towed the burning craft about 50 yards offshore with a grapne but the line burned through and the wind blew the blazing cruiser back toward the dock. Ed Bowen, 35, son of the innkeeper, then hooked an anchor to it from another boat and towed it about 250 yards to My Legs Island, where it burned to the water's edge.

The elder Bowen said he thought the explosion was caused by a spark from the engine igniting gasoline fumes in the cockpit.

Macy Denies Barrett Auto Deal Probe

Columnist Drew Pearson said in a radio broadcast yesterday that Police Superintendent Robert J. Barrett is being investigated by Congress for personal automobile transactions since 1941.

Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.), chairman of a House subcommittee investigating questionable automobile trade practices, said last night on being asked for comment:

"I have not heard anything about it. I checked with counsel about it and no investigation is being made in that line."

"Under Investigation"

Pearson said Barrett is "now under investigation by Congress," adding that "he got a 1941 Buick and then three new Pontiacs in 1946, 1947 and 1948, which he resold at a profit."

The columnist also said that Lieut. Jacob Wolf, head of the police automobile squad of the District of Columbia, "bought four new Pontiacs and a new Chevrolet" and "also helped 40 or 50 friends get new Pontiacs." Neither Barrett nor Wolf could be reached for comment on Pearson's remarks, made on his weekly WMAL broadcast at 6 p. m. over the American Broadcasting Company network.

Hearings On Today

Congressional hearings on trade practices of automobile dealers will be resumed today, centering on representatives of three Greater Washington firms.

Appearance of officials from the following dealers will bring to five the number of companies studied by the Macy Subcommittee of the House Public Works Committee.

Ourisman Chevrolet, Inc., 610 H st. ne.; Mandell Chevrolet Co., Inc., 1800 Nichols ave. se., and Kenyon-Peck, Inc., 2825 Wilson blvd., Arlington, also a Chevrolet firm.

30 Witnesses Called

About 30 witnesses are expected to testify.

In a statement described as "the other side" of the hearings, the Washington Automotive Trade Association last night quoted a recent news report by an American Broadcasting Co. commentator, Martin Agronsky, who said:

"The great majority of automobile dealers have followed perfectly honest and decent trade practices, and the exceptions—exposed here in Washington, it is only fair to report—should not in any way reflect on this honest majority.

"I know from personal experience that the new car I bought last year came to me without a single accessory I hadn't myself requested, and I was never asked for an extra dime by the salesman. Generally, however, this investigation has done a lot of good."

Boy Entering Hospital for Tests Today

A 13-year-old Mountain Falls, Va., boy—a "blue baby" since birth—is expected to enter Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore today with the hope his life expectancy can be prolonged.

He is Claud. Sine, one of six children of Mr. and Mrs. Howard R. Sine, who live in an isolated community 15 miles from Winchester, 10 miles from a major highway, and 5 miles from a telephone.

Claude was born with a heart malformation that causes him to receive insufficient oxygen from the blood. It is an ailment that prevents most child sufferers from living to an adult age.

Today, or as soon as possible, it will be determined at the hospital whether a delicate operation originated by Drs. Alfred Blalock and Helen B. Taussig can save Claude.

Not all "blue babies" can be relieved of their condition through an operation, but of the approximately 800 cases Johns Hopkins Hospital has treated during the past four years, 85 per cent have shown improvement.

If Claude can undergo the operation, neighbors in the community are ready to do what they can to help Claude's father, a farmer, to finance it.

Toy Train Missing

A toy electric train, including its engine, four cars and accessories, were reported missing from a garage yesterday, after Mrs. Virginia Richardson, 5416 Nevada ave. nw., took inventory of the family's Christmas trimmings. Mrs. Richardson told police the train had disappeared sometime since August 31.

Inquest Today In Woman's Auto Death

A coroner's inquest will be held at noon today at the District Morgue in the death of Victoria Jones, 65, of 350 McLean st. sw., fatally injured by a hit-and-run driver Thanksgiving night.

The woman was struck in the 3200 block of Central ave. ne., according to police, who also reported they arrested the hit-and-run driver four minutes later at Southern and Central aves. ne.

Police identified him as James Turner Gibson, jr., 32, of 5001 Sheriff rd. ne. He was charged with manslaughter, driving while drunk and leaving after colliding.

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, in a hearing November 26, ordered Gibson held under $2500 bond and continued the case to December 9.

Store Robbed of $90, 8 Cases of Liquors

A total of $90 in bills, plus a case of champagne, a case of gin and six cases of whisky were reported stolen yesterday from the Arcade Liquor Store, 224 K st. ne.

Owner of the store, Harry Wallerstein, reported that store's window glass was broken early yesterday morning. Police valued the loss at $334.67.

'Carnival Time' Will Benefit Shut-In Children

About 120 District children will give a benefit performance of "Carnival Time" Thursday at 8:15 p. m. to raise money for equipment needed by the Public School Visiting Instruction Corps.

"Carnival Time," sponsored by the District Association for the Education of the Handicapped Shut-In Children and presented by students of the Madolin Smithson Hodgson School of Dance and Expression, will be held at Coolidge High School auditorium, 5th and Tuckerman sts. nw.

The money from the performance will be used to buy projectors, phonographs, records and films for education of Washington children confined to their homes or hospitals. Admission will be $1 a person.

Anti-Tooth-Decay Plan Nearly Ready

Plans are nearly ready to use sodium fluoride, the tooth-decay preventative, at Bancroft Elementary School here, District health officials said yesterday.

Bancroft was one of 13 schools selected in a cross-section of the city's white schools for the fluoride demonstration. A similar demonstration was made in the District's Negro schools three years ago.

Dr. A. Harry Ostrow, director of the Bureau of Dental Services, said Bancroft pupils today will receive slips for their parents' or guardians' approval and signature. The approval is required before sodium fluoride application is made.

The demonstration will be without cost to students.

G. F. Johnson, Shoe Company Founder, Dies

Endicott, N. Y., Nov. 28 (AP).—George F. Johnson, 91, founder of the Endicott-Johnson Shoe Corp. died at 10:20 tonight at his home here. He had been ill for seven weeks.

Johnson is survived by two sons, George W. Johnson of Endicott, president of the corporation, and Walter L. Johnson of nearby Vestal; two daughters, Mrs. M. W. Robertson of Boston, and Mrs. Lloyd E. Sweet of Binghamton, and one brother, C. Fred Johnson of Johnson City.

Johnson was born October 14, 1857, at Milford, Mass. As a young man he moved to Binghamton and went to work for the Lester Brothers' shoe factory.

Eventually he came into complete control of the factory.

Salvation Army to Enlarge Youth Program, Chesham Says at Girls' Home Dedication

The Washington Post

OPEN HOUSE—Mrs. Lucille Berry, senior hostess, offers punch to Capt. and Mrs. A. J. Osborne of the Salvation Army, during the open house which featured rededication yesterday of the Army's Evangeline Residence, 1330 L st. nw. Evangeline Residence is one of 12 nonsectarian homes throughout the country which the Army operates for girls away from home.

The Salvation Army has enlarged its over-all program to include the development and preservation of the morals and faith of the younger generation, Commissioner Albert Chesham, head of the Salvation Army's southern territory, said yesterday.

Speaking at rededication ceremonies at the Evangeline Residence, a home for 270 business girls in Washington, Commissioner Chesham said the purpose of the corps has spread beyond reclamation and salvaging of the lost.

The Evangeline Residence here, he said, is one of 12 nonsectarian homes located throughout the country that provide guidance for single young girls living away from home.

The program yesterday marked completion of extensive refurnishing and renovating of the residence at 1330 L st. nw., owned by the Salvation Army for 25 years. Rooms and cafeteria service are provided for its residents, and Salvation Army officials estimate that it serves more than 2000 young business women each year.

At an open house reception, guests were presented to Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, and Mrs. Hershey, and Commissioner and Mrs. Chesham.

Visitors were then shown through the building by a group of hostesses that included Miss Virginia Wilmoth of Buffalo, N. Y., Miss Doris Barton, Allentown, Pa.; Miss Madelene Field, Allentown, Pa., and Miss Ruby Ridgill, Manning, S. C.

"ONCE UPON A TIME..."

"Wonder what Aladdin or Alice or Snow White or Cinderella would say if they could see the Wonder World of Modern Electrical living? Because 'Once Upon a Time' we didn't have these marvels we take for granted today.

"Of course, my four-year-old takes them for granted even more than adults do. There's an Electric Bed Cover to keep him snug at night; his pet children's programs on the radio and our new television set; the light that lets me read him a story; the printing press that printed it; his smoothly machined toys; his spanking-clean pajamas; the telephone talk he just had with his Grandma, even the clock that points to his bedtime.

"All wonders, indeed! Every one directly dependent upon electricity. A fairy story come true!"

COUNTESS PALFFY

Countess Here To Speak on Literature

Arriving in Washington today for her first return visit since she lived here in the early days of the war will be Countess Eleanor Palffy, author, lecturer and world citizen, who is equally at home in Paris' Faubourg, Boston's Back Bay, New York's East Side or this Nation's Capital.

The American-born Countess came to Washington shortly after the fall of France. She took a house in Georgetown and entertained there frequently. She also negotiated a heavy speaking schedule for the Red Cross. Her lively talks, accented with rare wit and understanding, coupled with a vast fund of information about prewar Europe, gained her an extensive following. At the insistence of many persons who had heard her on the platform or over Capital dinner tables or had read her articles in magazines, she decided to write her memoirs. The resulting book, although called "Largely Fiction," is palpably the autobiography of a fabulous life.

Born in Rhode Island, the former Eleanor Roelker married Count Paul Palffy, a Hungarian who became a Czechoslovak after the Treaty of Trianon, and then went to live in his semi-feudal ancestral castle. She spent 20 years in Europe, and her book is penetrating proof that she came to know prewar Europe as well as her native America.

Countess Palffy will negotiate a crowded schedule while in Washington. Tuesday she will be guest speaker at a luncheon of the Women's National Press Club. The event will take place at the Willard Hotel at 12:45, and her subject will be "Literature versus Life."

That evening she will appear on Hazel Markel's television program, Station WTTG, at 7:30. Wednesday morning at 11:30 she will be interviewed by Ruth Crane over Radio Station WMAL.

Ecuador Envoy To Entertain

The Ambassador of Ecuador and Senora de Dillon will entertain at a buffet supper on Wednesday evening, December 8, for members of the Pan American Liaison Committee of Women's Organizations.

The program will include talks by the Ambassador, Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney and Duncan Aikman, author of "The All-American Front" and "Turning Stream."

Arrangements for the supper are being made by the committee president, Mrs. John T. Lucker, and Mrs. Thomas Burke. Other members of the Liaison Committee are Mrs. R. Mills McClintock, vice chairman; Mrs. Frederick Allman, Mrs. Benjamin Soule Gantz, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. Paul E. Magnuson, Mrs. Louis Renfrow and Mrs. Edward Campbell Shields.

Mr., Mrs. E. R. Pope Have New Baby

A daughter, Diana Clara, was born Wednesday, November 24, to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest R. Pope of Chevy Chase.

Mr. Pope, at present with the State Department's "Voice of America," during the war was Chief of the Report Division of the Foreign Broadcast Intelligence Service in Washington.

Author of the best-seller, "Munich Playground" and of magazine articles on foreign affairs, Mr. Pope was Munich Staff Correspondent for Reuters news agency, then reported the first days of the war under William L. Shirer for the Columbia Broadcasting System from Berlin. He is a graduate of Cornell University and a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity and Phi Beta Kappa.

Mrs. Pope, who was Helen MacMaster, attended Marygrove College in Detoit. Her father, Billy Repaid, now on special assignment in Washington, was formerly the well-known "Flying Reporter" of the Mutual Broadcasting System.

Miss Saul Entertained By Mrs. Snow

Miss Rose Saul of Washingon, who has been living in New York for a number of years, was guest of honor at a welcome home party yesterday given by Mrs. Sims Snow. Miss Saul will spend the winter in Washington.

Among those there yesterday were the Ecuador Ambassador and Senora de Dillon, Mrs. Burdette Fitch, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Count and Countess de Rivero, the Second Secretary of the Swedish Embassy and Mme. Bendz, the former Italian Ambassador and Mme. Rosso who will be here this winter, and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Ansberry.

Also Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Andrew Saul, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Brison Norris, Mr. and Mrs. Gwynn Gardiner, Jack Logan and Fred Roy.

Luncheon Given By Mrs. Rohrbaugh

Mrs. Austin B. Rohrbaugh, jr., entertained at luncheon at Normandy Farm yesterday in honor of her mother, Mrs. Kate Ellerbe of Bennettsville, S. C. Other guests were Mrs. Austin B. Rohrbaugh, sr., Mrs. Clifton C. Viers, Mrs. Richard Slover and Mrs. Edmond Jones.

To Be Feted

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Henle have issued invitations for a dinner at the Shoreham on Thursday, December 9, in honor of Phelps Adams, president of the Gridiron Club, and Mrs. Adams. The dinner is one of the first of the festivities attendant on the annual Gridiron dinner to be held December 11.

Mrs. Dun to Greet Cathedral Members

Mrs. Angus Dun, wife of the Bishop of Washington, will entertain 30 Virginia chairmen of the National Cathedral Association at a buffet luncheon in the Bishop's House, Washington Cathedral Close, on Tuesday. Mrs. Frank S. Johns of Richmond, State chairman, will head the group. The visitors will tour the cathedral and will attend evensong before being guests at tea of Mrs. John Wallace Sutter, wife of Dean Suter.

Members of the Washington National Cathedral Association Committee will assist in welcoming the guests from out of town.

Assisting Mrs. Dun at the luncheon will be Mrs. James M. Barnes, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, Mrs. John Clifford Folger, Mrs. Robert Whitelaw Wilson, Mrs. J. Blaise de Sibour, Mrs. Dwight Davis and Mrs. Paul E. Shorb.

Sale Tuesday To Offer Dolls Of Many Lands

Dolls from Washington's embassies and legations will lend an international note to the Thrift Shop doll sale on Tuesday at 809 9th st. nw.

One of the unique dolls contributed for the benefit sale by embassy wives is not quite an inch long, yet it's meticulously dressed. This doll was brought from Ireland more than 100 years ago and has been treasured by a number of distinguished owners.

Among the other dolls to be offered for sale will be two bronze Peruvian Indians with hand-carved faces, and a replica of Maria Chapdelaine, heroine of Louis Harmon's novel about French-speaking Canada.

A Dominican peasant doll has been sent from the Dominican Embassy. Her gathered skirt is worn high around the waist in a "babo nuco" flounce which keeps it protected from mud of the country roads. Great Britain's representative is an elegantly costumed doll in an apricot satin gown and bonnet trimmed with cream-colored lace. And then there will be the Siamese dancing dolls, richly clad Greek and Polish dolls and many others.

The "First Lady" at the Thrift Shop sale will be the the golden-haired doll Mrs. Truman contributed. This country also will be represented by rag dolls, plastic dolls, story-book dolls and "human" dolls that actually drink from a bottle. Profits from the sale will be distributed among the Thrift Shop's six children's charities.

Mrs. Harold Albert Gardner, who was married on November 30, will be at home in Arlington, Va., on return from a Bermuda honeymoon. The former Miss Florence D. Rozanka, she was married in the chapel at the Naval Communications Station, Chaplain Michael J. MacInnes Officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Monticella Rozanka of the late Stanley Rozanka of Elizabeth, N. J. Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gardner of Arlington and Boston, Mass.

Mrs. Sidney P. Jacobs, jr., the former Miss Regina May Crump, became a bride on November 25. The Rev. Edward G. Latch performed the ceremony at his parsonage and a dinner followed at Hamilton Hotel. Mrs. Jacobs is the daughter of Mrs. Edith M. Crump of Mart, Tex. Mr. Jacobs is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney P. Jacobs of Arlington, Va. The couple will be at home in Washington while the bridegroom completes his studies at George Washington University

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Asks How to Help Sister and Latter's Small Children, Who Are Too Terrified by Man's Sadistic Abuse to Protest in Any Way

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What, if anything, can be done about this situation? My sister Fay has been married 12 years to a sadist and they have two lovely children whom he abuses beyond belief.

When riled, he hits them with his fists or holds them by their feet and bangs their heads against wall or sink; and even in his better moods, when he plays with them, he hurts them slyly and laughs while doing so.

The poor little baby, 18 months old, shudders when the father picks him up, then sits unnaturally still; and the little girl, 10, avoids him as much as possible. Fay was a healthy fine looking girl when she married Ed, but now she is a poor thin browbeaten woman who lives in terror.

Man Wears Cultured Face to Fool World

ED BEATS them almost daily, though never in the presence of my husband or myself (he wouldn't dare); then threatens to kill Fay if she complains to anyone; and also threatens to track her down and kill her and the children if she should try to leave; and at times he gets out his hunting gun to fully impress her.

Ed drinks constantly, too, but never staggers or seems intoxicated, and as they have no near neighbors, he has a free hand for his tyranny. During visits I've seen his sadistic abuse of animals they keep, also his intimidation of Fay and the children, and it's plain he is happy only when they are crawling to him.

He was always like this, but in the past year he has grown worse, and I have thought of sending an investigator out there; but as Ed comes of a wealthy refined family, and Fay is afraid to speak openly against him, I face the risk that his cultured voice and pleasing personality—when he cares to turn it on—might persuade the investigator that my story is preposterous. So what ought I do?

L. B.

Experts Advise Letting In Light

DEAR L. B.: I have discussed your letter with a lawyer, also with a trained counsellor in family relationships; and both concur in my feeling that your natural close kinship to Fay, plus your generalized knowledge of Ed's obviously insane abuse of wife and children, invest you with moral warrant to crusade for protective action.

These consultants agree that the first step is to "let in light" on the situation. How? By persevering and biding your time to get an interview with someone in authority at a qualified social agency, say the Family Service Society or the Home Service Department of the Red Cross, and reporting (to that person) all you know about the situation, and stressing especially the children's plight.

To quickly certify the factual integrity of your concern, you should take to the interview a written list of incidents you've seen or heard about from Fay, also the dates on which these occurred, to document your conviction that Ed is sadistic and getting worse; and that Fay is too broken by torture and terror to openly defy him.

Child's Behavior Unveils Pretense

GIVE a detailed picture of the children's conditioned reflexes of horror; also, of Ed's talent for turning a cultured persuasive mien to the world when exposure threatens. Paint in his wealthy "refined" background, and frankly say that because of it you've hesitated to broach the subject, lest he delude inquirers, defeat your purpose and unleash mad vengeance on his dependents.

My consultants recommend a psychiatrically trained family consultant as the appropriate investigator, especially if skilled in psychiatric understanding of child behavior, since the involuntary attitudes of children tell a great deal about hidden factors in family life, to the case worker who studies them for significant clues.

In addition the lawyer points to the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Children, also the Juvenile Protective Association, and suggests that legal counsel available to these groups would be seasoned scources of guidance in espousing the children's rights to deliverance from Ed's ruinous abuse. So, for advice, explore these potentials quietly, and accept the verdict of experts as to what can be done.

Peach Torte

A small serving of this rich "Peach Crisp Torte" makes a delicious ending to any meal. There are good-tasting canned cling peaches in the filling while the crumbly top and bottom crust have a yummy butterscotch flavor. Serve it warm with thin cream if you like.

PEACH CRISP TORTE

1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup brown sugar (packed)
1 cup quick-cooking oats
½ cup butter or margarine

FILLING

4 to 5 canned peach halves
¼ cup canned peach syrup
2 tablespoons cornstarch
1 tablespoon granulated sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Sift flour and salt together. Add sugar, oats and butter and blend with pastry until crumbly. Sprinkle half the mixture in greased 9-inch-round pan. Spread with filling and top with remainder of crumbly mixture. Bake in slow oven (300 degrees F.) one hour. Serve warm.

Filling: Dice enough peaches to make 1 cup. Blend syrup, cornstarch and sugar thoroughly. And peaches and cook and stir over moderate heat until thick and clean. Remove from heat and blend in lemon juice.

Serves eight.

About Chimes That Tinkle

I'm interested in finding what we called when I was a child "Chinese Chimes." They were made of pieces of glass or metal, which were hung on the porches and gently tinkled in the wind. My mother wants them and I hope you or one of your readers can tell me where they can be found. C. M. C.

The chimes you wish are called Oriental Wind Chimes and can be purchased at a shop on Pennsylvania ave. which sells Chinese goods. For further information about them, call the shop at Metropolitan 9014.

I should like very much to have a suggestion or two concerning the decorating of three leaded glass windows which are over my buffet. These windows open outward and there are some panes of colored glass. The windows face west. There is another pair of windows, regular size, in the room, for which I have a pair of rust colored drapes. In the summer I use cretonne drapes in the room, on the regular windows. Forgot to mention that the panes are diamond shape. The windows are quite pretty, but they do need something. The window ledge is large enough to hold small vases, etc. H. P. R.

You could treat the three windows as one unit, placing one short gathered valance across the top. Make this of material to match the rust drapes if that color would blend with the color of the window panes. Or, if you have glass curtains at the other windows, this tiny valance could match them.

Another treatment would be to use one shaped valance board across the top of the three windows, and at the two outer sides of the group hang straight drapes to match the others in the room. The drapes should extend to the sill. If you use the valance board over the three small windows you should also use it over the other windows in the room.

Still another treatment would be to place several pots of ivy or philodendron on the sill and train the vines upward to eventually frame the window. Place the vines in colorful pottery, brightly polished copper or brass pots.

I have an all-wool baby blanket, crib size, which sheds lint so badly I've had to discontinue using it. Would washing the blanket prevent this trouble? I've also considered covering the blanket with cotton material, but wonder if the blanket will be any warmer than a cotton blanket, after it is covered. R. W.

Yes, washing the blanket and hanging to dry out of doors on a breezy day will help to remove excess lint. Covering the blanket with cotton will increase the warmth rather than lessen it because the several thicknesses of fabric will give additional air spaces which are excellent insulators.

About a year ago I purchased a blouse-length of white pure silk crepe, and until now it's been folded away in a drawer with other material. When I unfolded it I noticed the top piece and along the folds were a little yellowed, as though with age. I've washed it in luke-warm suds, but the stain is still visible. I would appreciate your recommending a mild bleach for it. J. P. K.

Place the silk in a solution of four tablespoons of sodium perborate to each pint of soapy water. Be sure to use a mild soap and lukewarm water. If the stain is not completely removed with the first treatment, it can be repeated. Be sure to rinse thoroughly after soaking.

The Family Scrapbook

'Growing' Furniture

In these days of high prices, we have to watch our pocketbooks. When buying furniture for children, one should avoid the "cute" highly decorated chair, table, or bed and get something that can be used as the children grow older.

There are beds with sides suitable for the very young child which later can become very good youth beds when the removable sides are taken off. Sturdy chairs into which the youngsters can grow are also good buys. However, until legs are long enough to touch the floor, a foot stool high enough so that feet can easily reach it, should be provided.

When children are under 6, they may be interested in colorful decorations for their furniture. Later, such decorations will seem "babyish" to them. Use of coverslips with designs interesting to the 3 or 4-year-old later can be replaced with something more appriate to the "grownup" of 8.

Whenever possible, too, children should have a part in the selection of their furniture. You may be surprised to see what good taste they have.

NOW ABOUT THIS "MYSTERY DEBUTANTE" ROUTINE -- YOU MEAN YOUR FATHER IS SUPPOSED TO BE ALIVE, AND YET YOU'VE NEVER SEEN HIM?
NOT THAT I REMEMBER. HE WAS A "BUSINESS MAN" BUT I NEVER LEARNED WHAT BUSINESS. I HAD LETTERS FROM HIM MAILED ALL OVER THE WORLD, BUT THEY NEVER SAID ANYTHING ABOUT HIMSELF. I WENT TO THE BEST SCHOOLS AND HAD EVERYTHING I WANTED--
WITH PEARSON PAYING THE BILLS?
YES, BUT HE NEVER TOLD ME ANYTHING. AND HE BRUSHED ME OFF SO OFTEN WHEN I WAS YOUNG THAT I JUST GOT OUT OF THE HABIT OF ASKING QUESTIONS. AND I HAD A WONDERFUL TIME, ALWAYS.
IT WAS JUST RECENTLY WHEN I TURNED 21 AND BECAME OFFICIALLY GROWN UP THAT I REALIZED I COULDN'T STAY IN A DREAM WORLD FOREVER. AND WHEN YOU CAME ALONG, IT SEEMED LIKE THE TIME TO DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT.

Chamberlain Lads Have Time on Their Hands

A delegation of clock rapair students from Chamberlain Vocational High School forwards this plea:

"Teacher George H. Tobey is trying to teach us how to be clock repairers, but we're not getting enough actual practice.

"So please tell anybody who has a faulty clock to give us a call (National 6000 and ask for the school). We work for nothing, and charge only for the parts.

"And we'll even give free pickup and delivery service. So give us a break and keep us busy."

The plea is signed by Jackie Wyatt, Arlen Helfand, N. E. De-Ment, Joe Ruzzi, John Fekete, Ned Spangler, James Strotkamp, John Lane, Jimmy Rollins, Carl and Donald Dahlquist, Danny Kern and Joe Wilson—whose ages range from 15 to 22.

When I was a boy, they taught me that "the Devil finds work for idle hands." But these boys seem to be having a devil of a time finding idle clock hands to work on.

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

The other day you referred to a secretary as "officious" merely because she asked in a polite tone who was calling.

I have been a secretary for 20 years and have yet to have a boss who doesn't ask "who's calling?" when he's told that he's wanted on the phone. And for good reason.

For example, if the caller is going to want to talk about some matter which has been discussed before, the secretary can place the file on the matter before her employer, and thereby save his time and the caller's.

In all my experience, I have yet to find anyone who resented the secretary asking a caller to identify himself.

Edith Woodruff
Secretary to Congressman Hinshaw

Dear Miss Woodruff:

I guess I didn't make myself clear. I don't object to being asked "who's calling?"

What I do object to is being asked that question before the secretary tells me whether her boss is in or out.

I'll explain at greater length on my first program for WTOP, at 10 o'clock this morning.

Incidentally, I don't blame you for defending secretaries—inasmuch as your office is one of the easiest to deal with in Washington.

Bill.

PERSONAL NOTES

Maurice Moore, 51st st. ne.: There's a very simple explanation for the line "add end oath—L" which you saw.

Every newspaper story carries a "slug" word for easy identification. Apparently there was a story about an oath on this day, and it was slugged (obviously enough) "oath."

When additional facts on the story were sent to the composing room, the slug line was "add oath" so that the compositors would know how to identify the copy.

Then, when some still later information came in, it was slugged "add end oath." This indicated that this was the last "add." And the "L" identified the whole business as a local story, to differentiate it from national, telegraph, sports, society, and so on.

These identifying guide lines are supposed to be thrown away when the type is placed in the form. Apparently one of them was overlooked, and got into the paper for one edition.

When a deadline looms, and there are truck, train and plane schedules to meet, it's a wonder to me that the printers don't overlook more things.

A PROSPECT FOR PAPER PLATE SALESMEN

W. L. Fox of 1731 New Hampshire ave. nw. passes along a story he got recently from former District Liner F. M. Countiss, who is now living in Los Angeles:

Two old backwoods bachelors got to talking about cooking one day, and one mentioned that he'd once bought a cook book, but couldn't get much out of it.

"Too much fancy stuff, eh?" asked the other fellow.

"Yep," replied the first guy, "every one of them recipes started out the same way: 'take a clean dish'—and that finished me, right there."

MISCELLANY

Francis X. Pignone of 58 Hillcrest dr., Fair Haven, Alexandria, Va., passes along a clipping from one of our afternoon contemporaries which informs us that "Switzerland has 58 breweries, which operate mostly on hope from the American zone of Germany" . . . I thought all they were exporting from the American zone was gloom . . . Helen Hamer tells me that Federal Union, Inc., 700 9th st. nw., picks up a little extra revenue for its activities by selling Christmas cards . . . Bernice M. Willey of Lanham, Md., expresses her approval of our scented editions (Dial Soap ad) by writing me on equally scented stationery — and that certainly makes scents, any way you spell it . . . The streetcar tokens (invalid type) for Children's Hospital still trickle in every now and then—the latest from Mrs. Merton H. Dickinson of 1300 North Hudson st., Arlington, Va . . . I suppose my 12-year-old relative will still be collecting them when I've got a gray beard and he's doing the writing chores for the family . . . That'll be okay—but I certainly hope I finish the Kilmer campaign in my own time.

OVERHEARD

One: She certainly is outspoken.

Two: Not by anybody I've ever met.

WONDER WHY?

John P. Mullery of 1139 19th st. ne. wonders "how many of our public buildings have most of their entrances decorated with the admonition: 'Use Other Door'."

CHARGE IT

We owe a good deal to our ancestors
(To those who have gone before).
But due to the high cost of living now
We'll owe our descendants more.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Those real estate ads that offer "full basement"—do they mean after a rainstorm?

Listen to Bill Gold's "This Is Washington," the District Line on the Air, Monday through Friday, over WTOP, from 10 a. m. to Arthur Godfrey time at 10:30.

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—One of Humphrey Bogart's friends, who has seen many evidences of the star's pugnaciousness and irascibility, heard him discussing plans for renovating the house when his baby arrives. "Bogey," he asked, "are you going to do the nursery in barbed wire?"

Paul Muni recently starred in a telecast of Elmer Rice's play, "Counselor-At-Law." He went to a department store to buy a suit he thought would be appropriate for the role . . . Muni's nose is short, and he had been experimenting with a putty-nose, one which he believed might make him look like a typical criminal lawyer . . . While the salesman showed him some suits, Muni crossed his arms, placed his index finger under his nose as if in deep concentration, and the horrified salesman saw his customer's nose slide up and up until it finally came off.

Prof. Irwin Edman tells of a snobbish golfer at the St. Andrews course in Scotland, who was asked by a stranger to join him in a twosome. "Where are you from?" asked the Scot, and was told "Australia" . . . "Oh," said the Scot, "a colonial. What do you do?" . . . "I'm a salesman," said the Australian . . . "Oh, in trade," said the Scot. "What school?" . . . "Eton," said the Australian . . . "Really," said the Scot. "Army?" . . . "I was in England during the war," said the Australian. "In the Guards" . . . "I'll tell you what," the Scot conceded, "I'll play you nine holes."

Beatrice Lillie once went to a movie which had been advertised as a "Must" for all moviegoers. "How'd you like it?" Miss Lillie was asked. "Is it really a 'Must'?" . . . "Not quite," she said. "It's a 'Maybe.'"

DRAMA DEPT.: Hiram Sherman, who won good notices in the recent flop, "Town House," has had a varied career in the theater. He played roles in most of Orson Welles' productions, in comedies, farces and once even in a drawing-room comedy by S. N. Behrman. "Imagine me, in a drawing-room comedy, and I've never even been in a drawing room," said Sherman. "I'm the bull in Mr. Behrman's china shop."

BUSINESS DEPT.: Irwin Shaw, author of the best-seller, "The Young Lions," started his film-writing career many years ago at RKO. A few days after he arrived there, Shaw was summoned by an RKO executive who confronted him with a clipping which quoted Shaw as having said: "I played football. I was a third-rate football player" . . . "Mr. Shaw, we don't want this kind of publicity," the executive warned him. "Nothing associated with RKO ever should be third-rate."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Kerr Ribs Truman on 2 Sweeps

By Drew Pearson

Democratic Senator-elect Bob Kerr of Oklahoma couldn't resist a little good-natured ribbing when he breezed into town the other day for his first meeting with the President since the election.

Pearson

"You Democrats did a great job in Missouri," said the hefty, 6-foot-2 Oklahoman. "Yes, that big victory vote you turned out was really inspiring. Of course, it wasn't quite as big as the victory margin we polled in Oklahoma."

"Yes, I know all about it," chuckled Mr. Truman. "But did you notice the congressional gains we made in Missouri? We knocked off eight Republican Congressmen in the House of Representatives. There's only one Republican left in the Missouri House delegation."

"Hmmm," mused Kerr. "You say that Missouri still has one Republican Congressman? Very unfortunate. In Oklahoma we made a clean sweep, electing all Democrats to the House. Maybe we could give you Missourians some pointers."

"Just give us a little time," countered Mr. Truman, with a grin. "We're working on it."

Note—Out of 13 Missouri House members, the only Republican who survived the election was Dewey Short. Democrats swept all eight House seats in Oklahoma, including two formerly held by Republicans, plus the Senate seat of Republican Ed Moore, whom Kerr succeeds.

Lobbying in Secret

Former Congressman Roger Slaughter of Kansas City, now indicted for failing to register as a lobbyist, has concocted a legal toe-stubber, which he will take to the Court of Appeals.

He claims that lobbying was part of his legal work and that a lawyer's service for his client is privileged. If the Kansas City former Congressman gets by on this one, all lawyers will automatically be exempt from the lobbying laws.

There's nothing illegal about lobbying—provided it is done in the open. That is the reason for the Lobbying Act, which requires lobbyists to register with Congress, telling who they're working for and how much they're paid.

Note—It was Slaughter who was largely responsible for farmers' failure to get full parity prices; for he lobbied through Congress the provision prohibiting the Government from renting more grain storage space.

Toward Monopoly

Scarcely a line appeared in the newspapers, but every businessman should read the warnings to American business given before the House Small Business Committee by Morris Ernst, New York attorney.

Although Ernst blasted the dangers of monopoly, he also warned against Government controls, on the ground that the Government "will get too big and (as in Russia) do an inefficient job."

Big business itself is blazing the trail for "statism," Ernst charged, by its unpoliced monopolies, adding that mergers today are the highest in 15 years.

To stop the trend, Ernst urged Congress to begin breaking up the big insurance companies, chain stores and other monopolies, just as we have broken up utility holding companies and chain banking.

Would Revise Mandate

At the same time, declared Ernst, the "mandate" of the Commerce Department should be rewritten by Congress to make that department the servant of 500,000 small free enterprises instead of the servant of 400 big concerns "that control one-half of the resources of the United States."

Ernst contended that the dismembering of monopolies was not only good democracy, but good business for everybody, including the big firms. He cited innumerable studies, showing that the prime motive behind a monopoly was power—not profits.

A study made in 1935, he said, showed that 19 large steel companies lost 19 million dollars, while 129 small ones earned 6 million dollars.

"But that is not the question," concluded Ernst. "The question is that the power in the marketplace is such that the big boys will eventually squeeze out the little men—particularly the profitable ones.

"The big chains have sold, by and large, at 6 per cent under the local grocer, and temporarily it looks like a saving to the people. But they have destroyed a lot of local grocers by going in and selling eggs temporarily at a lower figure and then boosting it later."

Civil Air Patrol Will Celebrate 7th Anniversary

By the United Press

The Civil Air Patrol will celebrate Wednesday the seventh anniversary of its founding as an official auxiliary of the U. S. Air Force.

The Air Force hailed the organization as a valuable component for military and civilian operations in event of an emergency.

It cited CAP's World War II record as proof of its "potential worth." It included spotting 173 enemy submarines in offshore patrols and attack on 57 of the raiders; location of 17 floating mines; flights of 20,000 miles daily on "courier missions," and 46,000 hours of flying time in towing aerial gunnery targets.
